Stern Action Is Predicted To Speed Aid Bill Passage

George Promises To 'Do Everything Possible' to Meet Filibuster Threat

(See Also Capital Parade, Page 9.)

Sterner action this week to expedite action on the lend-lease bill to aid Britain was forecast last night as the Senate made ready for its third week of furious conflict over the measure.

Chairman George, of the Foreign Relations Committee, declared that activities of the bill's opponents today and tomorrow would determine whether a filibuster were actually under way, and that if such a course were being followed, "I shall insist on doing everything possible to meet it."

His comment came after the display of "bitterness, anger and hate" stemming from the fight had been pictured by Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, as a serious threat to the Nation.

Senator Murray, in a radio address charged that most of the attacks on the bill have been "based on propaganda" intended to confuse the people, and he added that no one knows "who pays for all this propaganda."

May Not Vote This Week

The Senate, already past the original deadline set for final action on the aid measure, meanwhile faced several more days of debate even before it could begin consideration of some 30 amendments already proposed. Voting on final passage, first set for last Saturday, now appears impossible before the end of this week, with some forecasts that action may be delayed even beyond that time.

Senator McNary, of Oregon, the minority leader, expressed hope for a final vote this week but said that unless work on the amendments can be started today or tomorrow, the final vote probably would not come before the middle of next week.

Opposition leaders, denying any intent to filibuster, thus far have confined their talks strictly to the bill, while admitting that they count on gaining public support for their stand as the debate progresses.

Majority leaders in Congress are to visit President Roosevelt again this morning for a discussion of strategy in the conflict.

Another Walsh Attack Due

Meeting an hour earlier than usual, at 11 a. m., the Senate is to hear another attack on the legislation by Senator Walsh, of Massachusetts, chairman of the Naval Affairs Committee, and sponsor of an amendment barring transfer of additional naval units to Britain.

Administration forces, no longer content to let opponents "talk themselves out" without defense of the measure, are slated to throw Senators Smathers and Tunnell, New Jersey Democrats, into the fight in favor of the President's proposals.

Amid some talk of resort to night sessions or adoption of cloture to expedite the bill's progress, it was indicated that Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, leader of opposition forces, would make a second extended address, and Senators Nye (Republican), of North Dakota, and Reynolds (Democrat), of North Dakota, were seeking additional time in which to oppose passage.

Senator George, likewise was looked to for another address in favor of the bill.

Norris Joins Ellender Group

Delaware Police Arrest 1,000 To Show How Blue Laws Can Be

Sabbath Statutes of 1740 Strictly Enforced to Stir Repeal by Assembly

By International News Service

Wilmington, Del., March 2.—Wilmington turned back the clock 200 years today and approximately 1,000 citizens were decidedly blue about it. Attorney General James R. Morford decided to enforce "to the limit" State blue laws of 1740, after the General Assembly failed to indorse a bill repealing the ancient statutes nad permitting towns to regulate their own Sabbaths.

More than 1,000 people were arrested. Among them were bus operators, trolley motormen and conductors, restaurant keeps, gasoline station and radio station operators, milk men and city employes cleaning snow the streets.

As soon as the men were arrested, however, they were released and allowed to return to their jobs.

Arrests, it appeared, could be made for virtually any kind of activity from washing the family car or playing bridge at home to selling a sandwich or a newspaper, all of which violate the Sabbah, according to the blue laws.

The bill, which would have repealed the blue laws, failed to pass the lower House by three votes. Immediately following this, Attorney General Morford called a conference of police chiefs and told them:

"The action of the Legislature is a mandate that the old law still stands and therefore must be enforced; but if it is not enforced as to all people under all circumstances, it cannot be enforced at all. A wide open Sunday must necessarily follow."

Morford, accompanied by a State detective and State Representative D. Buckingham (who voted against the liberal bill), made half a dozen arrests within half an hour.

Those arrested in Wilmington were permitted to sign their own bonds and will appear in municipal court tomorrow morning, where fines will range from $4 to $8 with an alternative of 24 hours in jail.

"One Sunday isn't really a test of the law," Morford said. "Wait until the people feel it over several Sundays."

Army Moves To Guard D. C. Water Supply

Fencing, New Pump Station, Underground Reservoir Urged

Two precautions against sabotage of the District water supply—the erection of $65,000 worth of fencing around the Washington Aqueduct and the construction of a $75,000 emergency pumping station—were recommended yesterday by the Chief of Army Engineers.

The recommendations were part of the 1940 annual report by Maj. Gen. Julian L. Schley to the Secretary of War.

The report also called for an increase in the Capital's water supply by the construction of a $490,000 underground reservoir in McMillan Park to hold 20,000,000 gallons of filtered water. Storage capacity for filtered water would be increased almost 25 per cent.

All in all, the report urged the expenditure of more than $1,800,000 for aqueduct, river and harbor improvement in the Washington area during the next fiscal year.

Nationally, Gen. Schley said that $357,793,925 could be "profitably expended" on waterways and flood control in the fiscal year 1942. President Roosevelt's budget estimates in January, which urged deferment of non-defense construction, recommended the expenditure of less than half the Army estimate, $164,213,465.

But Col. William J. Barden, the District engineer for the Capital area, said last night that there was no doubt but that funds for the

New Jersey Man Dies of Injuries In Laurel Crash

Struck by autos on nearby Virginia highways, two men died within a few hours of each other while being rushed to Georgetown Hospital here. Earlier in the day, two Fort Belvoir soldiers were killed in a third Virginia accident, and in Washington a fifth man succumbed to injuries sustained in a collision Friday at Laurel, Md.

A man identified as H. C. Burge, 60, of 1938 North Vance Street, Arlington, was felled and fatally injured by a car at Lee Highway and Veitch Street, Arlington County.

A 21-year-old bricklayer, William F. Young, of Arlington, was arrested as the driver of the car which struck Burge. He was held for the coroner.

Struck as he stepped from behind one car into the path of a second, according to police, George C. Frazier, 62, of Falls Church, Va., died while being rushed to Georgetown Hospital. The accident occurred at Shreve's Road and Leesburg Pike, Fairfax County. Police listed Keith Adrian, 37, of 1628 Q Street Southeast, as driver of the auto which hit Frazier. Adrian will appear at an inquest today.

The soldiers were Sergt. Clinton Lee Stewart, 24, and Corporal James Carter, both of the Fifth U. S. Engineers. Stewart was killed instantly, and Carter died less than five hours after their car collided with a truck at a highway intersection in front of the Natural Bridge (Va.) Hotel at 10 p. m. Saturday.

Sergt. Stewart's home address was listed as Oceania, W. Va. Authorities at a Lexington, Va., hospital, where he died at 2:45 a. m. yesterday, were unable to learn Carter's home address.

Christian Hoffman, 40, of Belmar, N. J., died in Casualty Hospital yesterday afternoon of injuries suffered Friday in an automobile accident near Laurel, Md. Hoffman's wife and son, Christian, jr., 4, are in the hospital recovering from injuries received in the crash.

Aubrey Lee Downs, 18, R. F. D. 3, Alexandria, was seriously hurt early yesterday when the car in which he was riding overturned after colliding with another automobile on Little River Turnpike, 2 miles west of

Bergman, Cotton Resign Coaching Positions at C. U.

Arthur J. (Dutch) Bergman, director of athletics and head football coach, and Forrest G. (Fod) Cotton, assistant football coach and head of basketball, last night announced they had resigned their positions at Catholic University. The announcements came as a Post reporter tracked down rumors of a sweeping athletic de-emphasis at the Brookland school.

Bergman joined the C. U. athletic department in 1930. His teams compiled an 11-year record of 60 victories, 31 losses and four ties.

'No Immediate Danger'

New Liner President Hayes Aground in Cape Cod Canal

Buzzards Bay, Mass., March 2 (AP).—The new liner President Hayes went aground tonight in Cape Cod Canal, but the Coast Guard reported she was in "no immediate danger" and "may be only stuck in the mud."

The cutter Algonquin and a picket boat and two Boston tugs were despatched to the assistance of the craft, which is a combination cargo and passenger ship.

The position of the vessel was given as near Hog Island, a short distance from the canal entrance.

In command was Capt. Dale E. Collins, 40, one of the youngest men to have charge of such a large ship.

The President Hayes, owned by the American President Lines, arrived in Boston only Saturday morning from Newport News, Va., where she was constructed.

She was carrying a New England-made cargo for consignments to ports all over the world.

The President Hayes is a vessel of 9,300 gross tons and accommodations for about 100 passengers and a crew of 124.

Built at a cost of approximately $3,000,000, the liner was the third of seven sister ships to be completed by the Newsport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co. for the American President Lines 'round-the-world passenger-cargo service and was delivered to her owners February 20.

Several weeks ago the liner Manhattan went aground off the east coast of Florida.

Dardanelles Closed to All Ships Lacking Special Permit

By the Associated Press

Istanbul, March 2.—The Turkish navy ministry announced tonight that the strategic Dardanelles Straits had been closed to all ships except those having special permits and employing Turkish naval pilots.

The ruling went into effect tonight.

Units of the Turkish fleet, it was learned at the same time, steamed out of Istanbul toward the Dardanelles today.

No explanation was offered immediately for Turkey's action in shutting the Dardanelles to any traffic except under strict Turkish control and for speeding her fleet into that vital zone.

The Dardanelles and the Bosporus are of high military significance because they are the gates between the Mediterranean Sea, already a major theater of the European war, and the Black Sea, which Germany has reached through her occupation of Rumania and Bulgaria.

At the same time, it was learned on reliable authority today that Germany asked Turkey to offer to mediate the European war during the recent visit in this country of British Foreign Secretary Eden.

The British, however, flatly refused to consider mediation when sounded out by Turkey, this source said.

Cabinet in All-Night Session

A well-informed source said that German Ambassador Franz von Papen approached Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu on the subject before Eden's arrival last week, pointing out that Turkey was in a most favorable position to act as mediator.

(Authorized sources in Berlin ridiculed the report and repeated the stock answer, "It is not for the winner to suggest peace.")

It was a weekend busy with diplomatic activity at Ankara, with President Ismet Inonu keeping in close touch with his cabinet.

The cabinet, with Inonu presiding, held an extraordinary session from late Friday night to the early hours of Saturday morning, presumably considering Bulgaria's new membership in the Axis three-power pact.

Eden in Athens To Map Plans For Joint Action If Nazis Attack

By the United Press

Athens, March 2.—Heavily protected against any surprise Italian air attack, British Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden arrived in Athens this afternoon aboard a huge Sunderland flying boat for emergency consultations on means of meeting any German attack through Bulgaria.

Accompanied by a large staff of military and diplomatic advisers, Eden arrived at 2:45 p. m. and conferred immediately with Premier Korisis, after which he was received by King George II.

Neutral diplomats believed that, with German troops threatening to strike down upon Greece, Eden's mission might be concerned with the possible dispatch of a British expeditionary force to Greece from Gen. Sir Archibald Wavell's armies in North Africa.

Met By Minister

British Minister Sir Michael Palairet was on hand at the airport to meet Eden, who is expected to remain here several days.

(In Ankara it was reported that Eden might also seek from the Greeks a "no separate peace" pledge in view of reports that Adolf Hitler, having occupied Bulgaria, is ready to bring strong pressure on the Greeks to conclude an immediate peace with Italy.)

Eden was presumed to have brought to Premier Korisis, King George and the Greek general staff a complete outline as to the contents of the "full agreement" which he and Gen. Sir John G. Dill, British Imperial General Staff chief, reached with Turkey Friday on means of strengthening the Anglo-Turkish alliance.

From Eden the Greek war leaders hope to learn what action Turkey will take, under her commitments to both Britain and Greece, in event of a German thrust across Bulgaria to Salonika. There have been reports in Athens, attributed to Turkish Foreign Minister Sukru Saracoglu, that Turkey regards Greece as being within her "zone of security."

The Greeks have stated in several official announcements that there can be no question of their submitting to a dictated peace and that Greece, confident of the support of her British ally, will fight to the end.

Crisis Deepens

By the Associated Press

Sofia (Monday), March 3.—British quarters in Bulgaria's capital declared early today that Minister George Rendel had informed King Boris Britain would break off relations with Bulgaria "probably Tuesday" and that a state of war would "undoubtedly follow."

As this meeting was in progress, the vanguard of German's onrushing Balkan army, speeding across Bulgaria from Rumanian bases, was reported to have reached the Greek frontier at four points.

At the same time two trainloads of Nazi infantrymen, dispatched from Plovdiv, Bulgaria's second largest city, sped toward the Turkish frontier.

Reports from the provinces said small Nazi detachments had taken up quarters in the Bulgarian towns of Slatograd, Melnik, Trigard and Svilengrad, a few miles short of the Greek frontier.

Other troops were said to be rolling into Plovdiv.

Rendel and King Boris were alone for two hours last night, talking in the monarch's study.

The talk was described as very friendly.

King Boris met the tall, stooped British Minister on the palace steps and escorted him into the study.

Rendel was understood to have expressed regret felt by the British government that Bulgaria should sign the Axis pact and open the country to German armies, since the British must resist the German march and Bulgaria may become a

Rumanian Oil Field Reported Hit by R. A. F.

Bucharest Foreigners Sent to Concentration Camps in Round-up

By the Associated Press

Negotin, Yugoslavia (at the Rumanian and Bulgarian Frontiers), March 2.—The Royal Air Force was reported today to have carried the European war to Rumania—making good Britain's threat to bomb Rumania's rich oil fields and communications lines if Nazi troops invaded Bulgaria.

The reports reaching here from Rumania said heavy explosions occurred in the Ploesti fields, north of Bucharest; added that big fires were started and attributed the damage to R. A. F. planes. The advices also said that all foreigners and Rumanians, save those with military passes, had been barred from the oil field region.

Early today several fleets of unidentified planes flew high over Negotin in the direction of the Ploesti fields.

(Dispatches from Bucharest declared official sources denied there had been any bombing of the Rumanian oil fields.)

Yugoslavia Reported Soon To Join Axis

Regent Believed Ready to Bow After Talk With Nazi Envoy

By the Associated Press

Zagreb, Yugoslavia, March 2.—The probability that Yugoslavia soon will sign the Axis three-power pact was reported in authoritative quarters tonight.

These sources said this resulted from conferences between Prince Paul, the Yugoslav regent, and Viktor von Heeren, German Minister to Belgrade.

Scarcely had Bulgaria entered the alliance, they said, than Von Heeren was granted a special audience last night.

New Order Discussed

Authoritative sources said Von Heeren "informed" Prince Paul that his conversations last week with German Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop concerned Yugoslavia's position in the Nazi plans for a new European order.

They said he "reviewed Yugoslavia's position in the light of recent developments in the Balkans, especially Bulgaria's adherence to the Axis pact," and "touched" on the question of Yugoslav mobilization in which troops are being sent to the Bulgarian frontier.

Von Heeren, they added, mentioned that this "unhappily" is costing Yugoslavia the equivalent of $1,675,000 a day.

Then, said these sources, Von Heeren "alluded" to the strength of German arms in Hungary, Rumania and Bulgaria (almost surrounding Yugoslavia with her Italian and German frontiers).

The final discussion before the audience terminated was said to have been based on Von Heeren's question of what Yugoslavia's attitude would be toward a "formal invitation" to join the Axis.

"Although there was no definite answer given by Prince Paul," said these authoritative sources, "Von Heeren was assured that such a development was likely to be favorably 'considered' by the Yugoslav government in the near future."

Fascists Bomb Quake-Stricken Greek City

Athens, March 2 (AP).—Italian bombers struck at the earthquake-stricken city of Larissa today during the peak of relief work, a government spokesman said, but no additional casualties resulted.

Buildings already shattered by yesterday's quake crumpled under the impact of bombs after the city's population had been removed, he added.

On the central Albanian military front the Greek army was said to have thrown back repeated Italian counter-attacks. The Fascists suffered heavily, the spokesman said.

Japan's Terms for Thai Peace Reported Accepted by Vichy

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, March 2.—Armed with instructions from Vichy which were only decoded last night, the French Ambassador to Japan, Charles Arsene Henry, saw Japanese Foreign Minister Yosuke Matsuoka today with the result that fears of a rupture seemed tonight to have disappeared.

It is understood that the French reply generally accepted the Japanese plan of settlement of the Indo-China-Thailand controversy, subject to certain conditions.

These are not of a nature to raise grave difficulties, but some complicated details are involved and separate negotiations between the Japanese and the French, and the Japanese and the Thailand delegations may continue for some time before the full conference reassembles to register the settlement which Japanese officials now foresee.

The atmosphere in conference circles strongly confirms reports transmitted from abroad that France has decided on total acceptance of Japan's proposals.

While the Vichy government's reply differs considerably, in some details, from Matsuoka's plan, it is believed that the French delegation in Tokyo has been given wide discretionary powers which virtually allow it to name the best terms it can.

Two Japanese ships have arrived at Saigon in readiness to evacuate Japanese nationals, but the latter are delaying their preparations in view of reassuring news from Tokyo.

Troop-Laden Italian Liner Reported Sunk

London, March 2 (INS).—The big Italian passenger liner Conte Rosso, believed to have been carrying either German or Italian troops and war material from Italy to Libya, was reported tonight to have been sunk, with heavy loss of life, after striking a newly-laid British mine in the Central Mediterranean.

The 17,879-ton steamer, converted into a troop transport, was said to have struck the mine off the coast of Sicily and to have gone to the bottom swiftly, according to advices that were not officially confirmed late tonight.

The sinking was reported in a dispatch from Shanghai to the British news agency, Exchange Telegraph. The dispatch quoted shipping circles in Shanghai as receiving reports of the sinking of the Conte Rosso which could carry several thousand soldiers.

Axis Regards Yugoslavia As Encircled

By C. Brooks Peters
Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, March 2.—The historic ceremony in Vienna's Belvedere Castle yesterday, in which Reichsfuehrer Hitler, Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, Count Galeazzo Giano, the Italian Foreign Minister, and Gen. Hiroshi Oshima, the new Japanese Ambassador to Berlin, watched the Bulgarian Premier, Bogdan Philoff, affix his signature to the four pieces of parchment, thus making Bulgaria the seventh signatory of the Tripartite pact, represents but the first stage in a new and vitally important Axis diplomatic offensive, it is confidently inferred here tonight.

Von Ribbenthrop's frank dissertation on power as a persuasive diplomatic instrument, followed the signing of the treaty—"I should like to express the conviction here that Bulgaria will not be the last State to come to us"—is interpreted in diplomatic quarters as indicating as imminent the entrance of Yugoslavia into the fold of "young nations."

Recent conversations between the Yugoslav premier, Dragisha Cvetkovitch; his foreign minister, Dr. Alexander Cincar-Markovitch, and Hitler, with Von Ribbentrop, present in Berchtesgaden, were said to have proceeded so satisfactorily that Belgrade's adhesion cannot be far off.

Axis Resources Stressed

These quarters agree the repeated emphasis which Von Ribbentrop placed upon the power and resources at the disposal of the Axis for the accomplishment of their proclaimed objective have not escaped notice in Belgrade or Ankara.

These objectives, it is frequently reiterated, have as their basis the elimination of foreign—by which is specifically meant the British—influences: First, from the European Continent, and then, from its "appendage"—Africa.

At present the Germans assert Greece alone, of all the southeast European countries, is playing the British role. That role, they now emphasize, will be shortlived, and Greece, it is suggested, will have to suffer for having preferred a proffered British guarantee.

Bulgaria is thought in neutral diplomatic quarters to be casting interested eyes on Macedonia, and Yugoslavia, upon Salonika. But while they recognize the justice of revisionist claims upon the continent, authoritative German quarters declare that for the present such claims must occupy a secondary position in view of vital problems of tremendous importance to all European countries which first are still to be settled.

Should, as the Germans seem to assume, the demise of Greece be imminent, then Yugoslavia, were she not to link arms with her Axis oriented neighbor, would be surrounded by cohorts of Berlin and Rome. Belgrade, however, in the view of neutral diplomatic quarters, now fully realizes the importance to her future joining what is becoming the European bandwagon.

Nazis to "Protect" Bulgaria

By the United Press

Berlin, March 2.—Germany's armed forces are rolling into Bulgaria to "protect" the small Balkan nation against Great Britain and to defeat a British plot to "extend the war" throughout southeastern Europe, it was said tonight in official German statements.

Authorized spokesmen tonight denied that any ultimatum "or anything resembling an ultimatum" had been directed against Greece.

De Gaulle's Men Capture Oasis, 1,000 Italians

London, March 2 (AP).—The headquarters of the "free" French forces announced tonight that its troops in Libya had captured the Oasis of Cufra, taking 1,000 prisoners and "important war material."

De Gaullist troops from the Chad region and the Cameroons of French West Africa have besieged Cufra since February 7, commanded by Gen. Eduard Rene Marie de Larminat.

Cufra lies more than 500 miles inland in southern Libya, separated from British forces along the coast by a desert land.

Four British Ships Sunk by Planes, Berlin Claims

Berlin, March 2.—Four British merchantmen, totaling 24,000 tons, were sunk by German air attack today, informed sources reported.

These were in addition to five vessels claimed by Germany's seagoing fliers to have been sunk Saturday in raids on British shipping.

One 10,000-ton ship was said to have been sunk immediately off the Shetland Islands today when a direct hit on the engine room exploded the vessel's boiler. Two other ships, of 8,000 and 10,000 tons, traveling in the same convoy, were so seriously damaged they sank soon after the attack.

U.S. Urged to Face Responsibility

Greenwich, Conn., March 2.—The United States should assume a responsibility with Great Britain in the struggle to maintain democratic governments in this world, Dr. Charles Seymour, president of Yale University, said in an address here today.

"The most magnificent example of courage and scarifice" to maintain democracy has been exemplified by Britain in its struggle since last July, he pointed out, and then asked: "Can we hesitate?"

"We enjoy great privilege," he continued, "but we shall have to maintain responsibility."

About 1,000-1 Vote Yes In Rumanian Plebiscite

battleground.

King Boris was understood to have replied that he had chosen the course which he believed best for his people.

The German and Italian ministers were received by Boris just before Rendel entered the palace.

Air raid defense precautions went steadily ahead throughout Bulgaria.

Antiaircraft batteries were installed on all large railway stations as well as important bridges and tunnels.

Although official orders were not given, many citizens of Sofia began leaving the city for the country.

Queen Ioanna, daughter of King vittorin Emanuel of Italy, and Crown Prince Simeon and Princess Marie Louise left for the country palace.

Meanwhile, Bulgaria's single-chamber Parliament approved with loud cheers and stamping of feet Bulgaria's joining with the Axis.

A voice vote was taken with about a score of the 150 members opposing confirmation of the pact. Five opposition members who demanded debate on the question were shouted down. They continued their criticism, however, despite the continual ringing of a brass gong by the speaker, and Parliament adjourned with some of the members still waving their arms and trying to make themselves heard.

"Forced" to Join Axis

The vote was taken after Premier Bogdan Philoff, looking rather grim, told the Parliament that Bulgaria had been forced by "pressure of events" to throw herself into the arms of the Axis.

Even while negotiations were under way, Germany requested permission for her troops to enter Bulgaria, he said.

Germany declared, Philoff said, that "their task temporarily aims at safeguarding the peace of the Balkans."

The premier had returned to Sofia at noon yesterday and had gone directly to report to King Boris.

The first British diplomats to leave the country went by automobile this morning to Belgrade, Yugoslavia. The group was headed by the British passport control chief.

Celebrates Liberation

Bulgaria yesterday celebrated the traditional "day of liberation and independence."

Thanks were being given in the Orthodox Cathedral for deliverence from Turkish rule 63 years ago and the echoes of religious music mingled in the streets with the roar of German army motorcycles and armored troop trucks. Overhead Nazi planes circled over the city.

Those Bulgarians who were not in churches stared at rolling Nazi columns are bemedaled, grinning German staff officers.

The day of celebration served to stress the Bulgarian man-in-the-street's bewilderment at Soviet Russia's attitude over what has happened to his country. Wreaths were placed on the statue of Czar Alexander who, with his Imperial Russian armies, was Bulgaria's "liberator" from the Turks.

Communists as well as hundreds of thousands of pro-Russian peasants have given no indication what their reaction may be to developments which, for the second time within a quaretr of a century, have lumped little Bulgaria's fortunes with those of mighty Germany in a fight against the British Empire.

Last week Communist peasant leaders urged their followers to oppose Nazi invasion by a campaign of propaganda and noncooperation, but cautioned against "forceful opposition." Now, however, most of those leaders are either in concentration camps or hiding in the hills.

The only point at which applause interrupted Philoff's speech to Parliament was when the foreign minister "warmly" thanked Germany for "the important place in the new order accorded little Bulgaria."

He told the legislators that "the German government recognizes our treaties of friendship" with Bulgarian neighbors and takes cognizance of "the Turkish-Bulgarian treaty which underlines again the peaceful policy of the Bulgarian government."

He said Bulgaria wanted to emphasize that the presence of German troops does not alter that policy and that Germany had given assurances that the laws of the country would be observed and Bulgarian interests safeguarded.

Bulgarian Minister Quits in Protest

London, March 2 (U.P.).—The Bulgarian Minister to Great Brtiain, Nicolas Montchiloff, resigned today in protest against his government's capitulation to Adolf Hitler and it was intimated that a "free Bulgarian" regime might be established in London.

The resignation of Montchiloff was understood to have contained condemnation of the decision to let the German army occupy Bulgaria as well as Bulgaria's adherence to the Axis alliance.

Montchiloff complained that his government had failed to send him any information for the past five days as to the decisive events under way in Bulgaria.

Hitler Wishes Bulgaria A Happy Future

Berlin, March 2 (U.P.).—Chancellor Adolf Hitler today sent a message to King Boris II of German-occupied Bulgaria expressing "My deepest wishes for the happy future of Bulgaria."

The Reichsfuehrer's message said: "Your Majesty: In this hour when Bulgaria again has expressed her friendship with Germany, Italy and Japan by joining the three-power pact I wish to express my deepest wishes for the welfare of Your Majesty and for the happy future of Bulgaria."

Foreign Minister Von Ribbentrop sent a similar message.

Copyright by New York Times

Belgrade, March 2.—The playing of "Tipperaray" in public places in the Yugoslav capital has been banned.

This police order is said to be the direct result of an incident at Sofia during which United States Minister to Bulgaria Earle knocked out a German who had objected to the playing of this World War song.

All foreign national anthems are forbidden, without special permission, in public places in Yugoslavia.

A popular Belgrade singer was recently arrested and fined 700 dinars for defying regulations in the Belgrade Kafana by singing the Slavic revolutionary song, "The wind is blowing from this side of the Carpathians and we and the Russians are 200,000,000 strong."

Chilean Leftists Show Majority In Early Returns

Santiago, Chile, March 2 (U.P.).—Partial returns in today's general congressional election gave parties of the left a slight majority.

Unofficial computations indicated the parties of left had won 32 seats in the Chamber of Deputies against 21 for the Conservatives and Liberals. Ninety-four seats had not been accounted for late this evening.

Plane Feared Lost in Alaska

Nome, Alaska, March 2 (U.P.).—An airplane dispatched from Nome to Point Barrow to take into custody a "violently insane" Eskimo woman has been missing since Thursday morning, and is feared lost.

Aboard the missing plane were Sig Wien, veteran Nome flier, Mrs. Almer Rydeen and a Dr. Hinkley of the United States marshal's office. Mrs. Rydeen and Dr. Hinkley were to act as guards for the Eskimo woman on the return trip.

in a two-week-old treaty of nonaggression and with Britain in a pledge of mutual assistance in the event of an act of "aggression" leading to war in the Mediterranean.

The government newspaper Ulus restated Turkey's stand, that she wants peace "but if war comes we are ready."

The officially controlled Turkish press unanimously demanded an explanation from Bulgaria for signing up with the Axis, and Aksam declared flatly that "the Bulgarians' action was contrary to the Turko-Bulgar declaration."

Tan predicted that "if the Germans start marching toward Salonika through Bulgaria they will surely meet the British and probably a Turkish-British combine."

If Bulgaria would remain loyal to the Turkish pact, Aksam said, "she must never allow Germany to pass through her to attack any Balkan country."

The Ankara radio stressed that Bulgaria need not necessarily join the war, pointing out that Hungary, an Axis affiliate, is at peace.

Why Life Insurance Keeps on Growing

Yes, life insurance is a big business.

You, the policyholders, have made it so. You have made life insurance the great business it is today, with its hundred and seventeen and a half billions of protection on the lives of 65 million Americans.

Here are two questions that you may want to ask about this business. First: why did it start? And, second: what made it grow? The answers are simple:

American life insurance started because people wanted a means by which they could protect themselves and their families against the unknown hazards of the future. And they wanted to do it by their own initiative and responsibility. So they created the life insurance business.

It was a new business in America 100 years ago. And it grew because it gave people what they wanted . . . Soon it was expanded to include income for old age . . . educational funds for children . . . provision for supplying capital to keep a business going after the death of the employer, thus keeping employees at work . . . and the satisfying of many other human needs.

Managements did their share in contributing to this growth by safeguarding the interests of the public—for no business could continue to grow steadily over 100 years without a high sense of public responsibility and trusteeship.

Life insurance agents spread the knowledge of what life insurance had to offer. People listened to them . . . bought a little at first, then more as their responsibilities increased . . . 65 million people have taken advantage of the idea . . . Today, half our population enjoys at least a degree of financial security in time of need, whereas 40 years ago only 10 million people enjoyed this protection.

They saw life insurance tested by panics, wars and pestilence, and saw progress in spite of these disturbances—and they approved. That is why life insurance grew to be a big business. And I expect it will keep on growing, in usefulness and service for the American people.

men was found in the woods at Derventa, Bosnia. A number of other German warplanes have been sighted over Yugoslavia territory, apparently flying to Bulgaria.

A wholesale round-up of hundreds of men and women with American, British and even French connections was reported under way in Bucharest today. Most prominent Jews were said to have fled already or to be under arrest.

A trainload of prisoners left Bucharest this afternoon for a concentration camp in the provinces, the reports said.

Ploesti, from which the oil fields take their name, is the capital of the Department of Prahova and lies at the southern entrance of a valley in the Carpathian foothills.

It is an important railway junction and has a population of about 77,000 persons. Rumania is seventh in world production of oil, producing about 26,100,000 barrels or about 2.08 per cent.

Bucharest, March 2 (U.P.).—Official denials were made tonight of rumors that British planes had bombed the Rumanian oil fields.

The Rumanian ministry of information described the reports as wholly untrue and Paul Lambright, manager of the Standard Oil interests, told the United Press by telephone from Ploesti in the heart of the oil field district that no British planes had been seen.

"It is untrue that the oil fields were attacked," Lambright said.

London (Monday), March 3.—The Royal Air Force took the offensive over the weekend, delivering heavy blows at the German occupied countries, while Britain enjoyed comparative immunity from aerial warfare.

British bombers for the second time within a week visited Cologne, leaving that important industrial center, with its war factories, river, canal and railroad transportation facilities "a raging inferno," in the words of one of the raiding pilots.

Also they pounced on enemy air bases at Borkum and Hamstede, whence German planes take off on raids to some parts of this country, and bombed the port of Harlingen.

The Germans meanwhile made only tame attempts to raid Britain yesterday, droning over isolated communities in Scotland, East Anglia and Southwest England, and dropping some bombs which did only minor damage to homes and hospitals. One German plane was shot down off the coast of Scotland, another off the coast of East England.

Short Alarm in London

There was a short alarm in London last night during which the antiaircraft guns rumbled distantly, but the raiders turned back without dropping any bombs.

Three British planes failed to return from the weekend offensive operations which, however, were described by air ministry officials here as "very successful."

The raid over Cologne lasted three hours beginning late Saturday night and continuing until early Sunday. It was the fifty-seventh time that Cologne had been bombed and the attack was on a large scale.

The belief was expressed here that considerable damage was done to factories, docks and other targets which became hidden in smoke, as salvo after salvo of bombs were dropped, touching off explosions and starting fires.

Fires on Both Sides of Rhine

On both sides of the Rhine, which divides Cologne, big industrial plants were seen to be ablaze. Pilots and observers said they counted explosions occurring sometimes at the rate of three per minute.

Saturday night's raids also included attacks on Rotterdam, Boulogne and various points in the Ruhr. It was the sixty-eighth time Boulogne had been raided and the thirty-eighth time Rotterdam had been bombed.

At Borkum yesterday British fliers machine-gunned the German barracks and then released bombs which, according to their reports, hit one hangar and damaged parked planes. At Hamstede several hits were said to have been made on a large hangar and other buildings, with at least one German airplane believed to have been damaged. At Harlingen, British bombers dropped explosives to the harbor but the pilots said later that there was too much cloud to make an accurate observation of the damage that had been done.

Seven China Relief Groups Unite in $5,000,000 Fund Drive

New York, March 3.—Launching a $5,000,000 campaign to finance relief and rehabilitation work in China on a much broader scale, James G. Blaine, president of the Marine Midland Trust Co., of New York, announced today that seven agencies serving medical, charitable, educational and economic needs in China have joined in a united appeal under his chairmanship.

Directors of the organization, known as United China Relief, Inc., include Pearl S. Buck, former Ambassador William C. Bullitt, Paul G. Hoffman, Thomas W. Lamont, Henry R. Luce, John D. Rockefeller 3d, Col. Theodore Roosevelt, jr., David O. Selznick, Robert G. Sproul, president of the University of California, and Wendell L. Willkie. Eugene E. Barnett, General Secretary of the National Council of the Y. M. C. A., serves as vice chairman, with Artemus L. Gates, president of the New York Trust Co. as treasurer.

Organizations joining in the united campaign include the American Bureau for Medical Aid to China, which supports emergency aid stations in Chungking, epidemic control programs, and training centers of physicians; the China Emergency Relief Committee, organized to raise funds for this and similar work; the American Committee for Chinese War Orphans, active in rescuing and maintaining orphaned children; the Church Committee for China Relief, providing direct relief in bombed and famine areas, food and shelter for the destitute, and work projects for men; and the American Committee for Chinese Industrial Cooperatives, operating 3,000 "vest pocket industries" employing some 500,000 refugee workers in a vast project to rehabilitate themselves and help replace the destroyed productivity of Chinese industry.

Also included are the associated boards for Christian China, representing 13 colleges with an enrollment of nearly 8,000 students, 11 of which institutions have been forced to transfer their teaching activities as far as 1,500 miles inland.

As chairman of the board of directors of United China Relief, Inc., Blaine explained that the campaign is not an additional appeal, but rather a coordination of the seven appeals now before the public. "Its two main objectives," he said, "are the relief of distress in China and the clarification of the present situation in America as regards the raising of money for China relief."

British Take Vital Pass In Eritrea

By the Associated Press

Cairo, March 2.—British soldiers closing in on Italian forces making a strong stand at Cheren, Italian Eritrea, have captured an "important pass" covering the approach to that vital junction point, the British announced today.

The Royal Air Force aided the besiegers by attacking "enemy positions."

Cheren is the key to Asmara, capital of Italy's oldest colony and 42 miles from the scene of the fighting.

In Ethiopia, native followers of Haile Selassie, inflicted considerable losses on the Italian garrison at Burye which attempted a sortie with cavalry and infantry," the communique added.

The British reported hundreds of Italians are surrendering daily, with the prisoner total in the Somaililand campaign nearing 10,000.

Some Italians were believed to have fled through Somaililand's "back door" and apparently are retiring to Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia.

The R. A. F. said one of its bombers machine-gunned and burned out two Italian planes at Alomata, on the Dessie-Asmara Road and then bombed and machine-gunned motor transport vehicles on the airdrome and in the vicinity of that Ethiopian town.

South African air force units again raided Neghelli, Ethiopia, and scored hits on a mechanical transport park, the R. A. F. said.

Thanks for the "cooperation and help" given by Egypt's military authorities to the British during the campaign against Libya were expressed by Gen. Sir Archibald P. Wavell, the British commander, in a letter to Premier Hussein Sirry Pasha of Egypt.

Nazis in Libya Take Victory Oath

Rome, March 2 (AP).—The German troops sent to Libya to strengthen faltering Italian forces there have taken an oath to "make the greatest effort for a joint victory" of Germany and Italy, the official Italian news agency, Stefani, reports.

The high command communique did not mention an "oath" and Stefani did not say when the pledge was made. It simply declared that Marshal Graziani and an unidentified German officer first reviewed the Nazi troops.

Then the German officer delivered a speech closing:

"At the beginning of Italian-German cooperation on African soil we swear to make the greatest effort for a joint victory for great Germany and great Italy. Long live great Italy! Long live great Germany!"

When he finished, Stefani said, the troops shouted:

"We swear it!"

The high command's communique said British were routed in two actions yesterday in the East African campaign—in the Arresa sector of northern Eritrea and in the Sirgoli zone, southwest of Asosa, western Ethiopia.

fencing of the aqueduct, the emergency pumping station and the new reservoir would be provided by Congress.

Gen. Schley's report, as released by the War Department, gave no reason for the fencing and pumping station projects.

Col. Barden said that the engineers feared sabotage "if the situation gets any worse."

The emergency pumping station, he said, would be vital if an accident occurred to the conduits leading from the intake on the Potomac River at Great Falls, Md., to the Dalecarlia Reservoir on Reservoir Road Northwest.

Gen. Schley's recommendation called for the conversion of the Dalecarlia hydroelectric station into a raw-water pumping station for lifting unfiltered water from the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal into the reservoir.

Fencing would enclose the intake at Great Falls, the Dalecarlia Reservoir and filter plant, the McMillan filter plant and several other works.

Other projects recommended for the Washington area included:

Expenditure of $276,000 for an excursion pier on the north side of the Washington Channel. Two yacht basins already have been completed and a commercial pier above the War College is under construction.

Reclamation and development of the Anacostia River and flats at a cost of $350,000; construction of levees and grade risings to protect Bolling Field and the Arlington Experimental Farm from floods, $35,000; dredging and the eradication of water chestnuts in the Washington Harbor, the Potomac, near Alexandria, and the proposed channel from Washington to the mouth of the river, $317,000.

British Receive 26th D. C. 'Bundle'

The Washington chapter of Bundles for Britain has learned that its twenty-sixth shipment of clothing to Britain since the war began has arrived safely in London.

Bulgar Army To Aid Axis, Italians Hint

By Camille M. Cianfarra
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, March 2.—Bulgaria's armed intervention in the European conflict is hinted at today in the Italian press, which also stresses that the conditions necessary for the spring military offensive of the Axis in the Mediterranean and the Near East have now been created.

Both Virginio Gayda, in the newspaper Voce d'Italia, and Giovanni Ansaldo, in Il Telegrafo, two of Italy's most authoritative commentators, make a point of the fact that Bulgaria has an excellent modern army and that she gives the Axis a "notable and valuable contribution."

Gayda, after announcing that Yugoslavia's adhesion to the pact is "not too far away," writes that the significance of the Bulgarian step "is furnished by her geographic position which places her in the center of the Balkan peninsula; by her agricultural and mineral resources, and by the quality of her hard-working and warlike people."

Bulgar Strength Cited

It is significantly certain that Bulgaria in the World War mobilized 1,800,000 men and "a study by a French general published last year states that Sofia can today place 500,000 men in the field."

The French general, Gayda says, stated that Bulgaria, by virtue of German aid, is the Balkan country best equipped with modern war materials — without considering Greece, which was abundantly supplied by Britain and France for the forthcoming war with Italy.

"It is therefore evident that the entrance of Bulgaria into the Italo-German system of alliances represents a definite clarification of the political and military situation in the Balkans."

British Declared Isolated

Ansaldo, after emphasizing that "Bulgaria is a country which has at her command a very strong people, a solid army and an important agricultural production," goes on to say that she is one of the smaller European nations which "are safeguarding their future by marching with the Axis."

The blunt announcement that everything is ready for the Axis spring drive is given by the Corriere Della Sera, which writes that "the necessary conditions to begin successfully in the new cycle of operations which will solve an important aspect of the strategic problem of the Mediterranean and the Near East have been created.

"The problem has precipitated the certainty that England was isolated in that sector. This isolation is now an accomplished fact. The rest will come."

Report on Nazi Agents in U. S. Expected Today

By International News Service

Government quarters last night awaited with keen interest the first report of the special United States grand jury investigating Nazi activities in this country, which is expected tomorrow.

Under direction of the Justice Department, the jury has devoted particular attention to Dr. Frederic Ernest Ferdinand Auhagen, called Nazi propagandist by the Dies Committee, and to Dr. Mannfred Zapp, manager of the Berlin-owned Aransocean News Agency in New York, it was disclosed.

Whether indictments will be returned against any of the persons under scrutiny was not announced. However, an official said the report will "carry action."

Any indictments, it was reported, would be based upon the failure of Nazi agents or propagandists to register with the State Department as foreign agents. Dr. Auhagen has not so registered, and Dr. Zapp has registered merely as a foreign news representative.

Hill-Billy Airs Cheer Greeks In Ghost City

By J. Wes Gallagher
Associated Press Staff Writer

With the Greek Army on the Northern Front, March 2.—Al Jolson's voice swelled brassily from an ancient phonograph, singing "There's a Rainbow 'Round My Shoulder."

Pinned on the wall above a blazing wood stove, the magazine picture of a long-legged American movie actress gazed down at four young Greek officers who sat sipping cognac and tapping their feet in time to the music.

As the officers substituted a hillbilly tune for Jolson there came the sharp clatter of Italian machine guns less than 300 yards away.

This is life on the "cognac-aspirin front"—a topsy-turvy battleground where soldiers sleep fitfully by day and fight at night amid the glare of searchlights and the flashes of bursting shells.

Because the Greeks occupy a town at the foot of a mountain held by the Italians this front is unique among the fantastic battlefields sprawled from the sea to the Yugoslav border.

It's a ghost city, shell-riddled. Nothing moves in the daytime.

The appearance of a single soldier brings a shower of rifle, machine gun and cannon fire from the heights above.

By night slinking shadows glide swiftly from building to building—troops on their nocturnal business.

Now it is nearly midnight. Someone suggests a look around as the "noon shift comes off work."

The "noon hour" is changed nightly so that if the time becomes known there will be no danger of Italians catching the men moving from the front lines for a midnight snack with a burst of gunfire.

With the nonchalant commanding officer in the lead, you walk out into the village street. On each side are two-story shops, the windows gaping without a sliver of glass, some roofless and with walls smashed.

Up this desolate thoroughfare the officer walks straight toward the Italian lines.

After a few steps, with only the outline of the man's head in front as a guide, there is a bright flash and down the street a noise like a giant firecracker.

"They're shooting at us," the officer whispers. "Less noise."

The line starts again, only to come to a sudden halt as a Greek sentry materializes.

The officer identifies the group and keeps going on until you wonder if he is going to walk straight into the Italian lines. Then you turn and almost fall into a hidden gun nest with soldiers sitting huddled in blankets.

Off to the right a shell bursts; then there is silence again. There isn't much to see—just blackness—but only a few yards away you know that Italian eyes and guns peer into the same blackness, waiting for a noise at which to fire.

As you proceed from post to post in the flickering light, the commanding officer halts before a man with a white mustache.

"How old are you?" he asks. "The truth, now."

"Forty-eight, sir," White Mustache replies proudly.

"Send him back of the line at the first opportunity," the commander orders, as he passes on.

War is for young men.

The tour is finished, the little group starts back down the street, when to the right an Italian searchlight blinks. The powerful beam swings back and forth, and then out.

"They have another light up there behind us," the officer says, points a few hundred yards up the black mass of the mountain.

"Just stand still if the light catches you," he advises.

A chill runs up your back and you can almost feel the bite of machine-gun bullets. You try to walk closer to the shadows, only to fall into the mud.

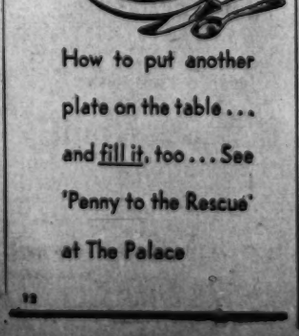

A few minutes later you arrive at the commander's quarters before a cheery fire.

Suddenly, outside the building, there is a flurry of machine-gun fire, followed by a burst of trench mortars which shakes the building. Italian searchlights go on, their shafts giving a grotesque Hollywood effect to the scene.

The telephone jangles inside. The commander listens a moment and hangs up as the uproar and searchlights fade.

"Just some patrol activity," he says.

Engel Starts 1-Man Probe Of Army Posts

By the Associated Press

While other legislators wrangle over whether to investigate the defense program, a whirlwind, one-man Congressional inspection of Army cantonments already is in progress.

It is being conducted by Representative Engel (Republican), of Michigan, a World War Army officer with a penchant for statistics and a reputation for the machine-gun delivery of speeches in the House.

Spurning a War Department offer to assign an Army officer to facilitate his inspection, Engel set out in his own car ten days ago for cantonments being established in the South. At the time, it was learned, the Army was looking for him to visit Camp Edwards in Massachusetts because he had made a speech in the House regarding that project.

The stocky legislator traveled about 2,200 miles on the Southern leg of his tour, visited six Army camps and spent about a day at each. That meant a lot of night driving and very little sleep.

Engel, silent thus far on his findings, said he intended to make a report to the House Appropriations Committee when the rest of his inspection tour was completed. To back up his verbal report, he has photographs taken with a camera he has used since his World War days in France.

Scattered accounts of how the Congressman operates filtered back to Washington occassionally during his Southern trip. One of his fellow-committeemen told of seeing him in action at Fort Bragg, N. C.

"He had four generals backed into a corner, peppering them with questions," the legislator recounted. "They looked as though they would much rather have been facing a firing squad."

Cut of Billion In Nondefense Budget Urged

A cut of at least $1,000,000,000 a year in Federal spending for nondefense purposes is possible without serious impairment of necessary governmetnal services, Roswell Magill, professor of law at Columbia University and former undersecretary of the treasurer, said yesterday.

The proposal for reducing nondefense expenditures came as Ernest Angell, chairman of the National Economy League, warned against possible competition between the defense industries and the Works Progress Administration for workers, in view of the probable absorption of all unemployed into industry by June 30, 1942.

Meanwhile the American Federation of Labor expressed alarm as to the possible results of the end of the war on labor, and asked for a governmental study of measures to be taken to avert mass unemployment and economic collapse at the end of the present national emergency.

Must Show Courage

In an article on "Financing Defense," in the magazine Investor America, Magill said that Congress and the President must show courage in keeping down governmetnal expenditures,

"If the Executive and Congress manifest courage in cutting down present ordinary expenditures, and determination in restraining new expenditures, the problem of financing defense can be considerably simplified," Magill said.

"Much greater cuts could and should be made than have so far been proposed," he continued. "It should be possible in times like these to reduce the great expenditures for public works, public highways, unemployment relief, and agriculture, for example, by a total of about $1,000,000,000, without serious impairment of necessary Government services."

The former Treasury official urged the formation of an advisory council on fiscal policy, as the Government had available great talent in both business and financial fields which could be mobilized for governmental service.

In order to get more funds, Magill suggested increase in present forms of taxes and the reduction of present exemptions to bring in more taxpayers and the raising of rates on income tax, personal and corporate, estate and gift taxes, and miscellaneous sales taxes.

Hindered Defense

The National Economy League, in a study entitled "WPA or Defense," charged that only one-sixth of WPA projects up to January 15 were for national defense, while the rest not only contributed nothing to defense, but hindered the progress of needed defense construcion through competition for materials and labor. During the last fiscal year, the WPA program used nearly $500,000,000 worth of materials, the league stated.

"The most important materials used were cement, clay and stone products, lumber, metal products and machinery, precisely those needed in the construction of Army camps, munitions factories and other defense workers,'" league report stated.

Furthermore, the WPA hindered the shift to defense and private employment throughout the country, because the average WPA wage is 44 cents per hour, compared with the basic 30 cents under the Fair Labor Standards Act.

The position of the A. F. of L. was outlined in an article "After the Emergency—What Then?" in the American Federationist, the official magazine of the federation. The article urged that every factory which was established be located not only for its wartime use, but also for use after the war in the peacetime economy of the country.

May Become Ghost Towns

"Unless this is done, we shall be faced with the prospect of building a network of industrial communities which are certain to become ghost towns, condemned to stand in the years to come as silent and deserted reminders of our improvidence," it was stated.

Careful planning of the post-emergency relief problem should be started at once if the burden of unemployment and dependency in the transition from a war to a peace economy is not to become insupportable, the article continued.

Plans for the demobilization of war industries and trade between nations should also be formulated not so that they could be implemented with binding agreements and carried out fairly and equitably with respect to all the nations concerned, the article stated, adding that to wait for peace before devising such plans and formulating such agreements would spell doom for any American participation in the world economy after the war.

German-Americans See Hitler Plot

New York, March 2 (AP).—Dr. Frank Bohn, chairman of the German-American Congress for Democracy, asserted today that Adolf Hitler was spending millions of dollars in the United States "to poison the German-American section of public opinion."

"I am ashamed to admit," Dr. Bohn told the first national conference of the organization, "that in the great Middle West the Germanized section of American opinion is, in the present crisis, a millstone about the neck of our country."

istration supporter, expressed his approval.

Senator Norris told the Associated Press that "we don't intend to send our boys across the ocean and I don't think it would hurt us to say so in this bill." He added, however, that "if there is any reason why it should not be included, I will be open to reason." The Administration contends adoption of the amendment would be poor strategy, in that it would notify the Axis powers no United States troops would oppose them, come what may.

Senator Murray, speaking over an N. B. C. network, conceded that it was "hard" for him to make a commitment on such an issue, but pleaded for speedy enactment of the bill.

"By aiding England to block Hitler's invasion and capture of the British fleet, we will keep war out of America," he argued.

"This crisis presents a cold question of American defense. That is exactly what this measure is intended to accomplish. If Hitler is successful, our international trade will be driven from the seas and our whole American economy will be changed. I am not so much alarmed about the danger of invasion as I am disturbed about the possibility of our economic strangulation by the totalitarian program of Hitler and his co-dictators."

Sen. Nye Calls Lend-Lease 'Go to War Bill'

Copyright by New York Times

Detroit, March 2.—Five thousand Detroiters Sunday cheered themselves hoarse at Masonic Temple when Senator Gerald P. Nye, addressing a "no foreign war" mass meeting, described H. R. 1776 as a "go-to-war bill."

Senator Nye called the lend-lease bill "the most unheard of grab for power ever undertaken in American history. Within a few weeks at most, Senator Nye said, "our going to war will follow the passage of this bill."

During the latter part of his speech, when he charged that British leaders want "American blood spilled on European battlefields," there came shouts from the audience of:

"Impeach the President!"

This was followed by lusty shouts of "Filibuster," "Stop that bill," and "We want a referendum on war."

The mass meeting was sponsored by Gerald L. K. Smith's Committee of One Million. Introducing the Senator, the radio evangelist said Nye was one of the men who "in every great crisis comes forward to speak for the people."

Senator Nye urged the defeat of the lend-lease bill "to prevent the United States being made a monkey of as it was 20 years ago."

"This bill takes us back to those very conditions that George Washington advised us to stay away from," he said.

He urged the audience to "remember that no nation has so outstanding a record for gainful aggresion as does Great Britain."

War propaganda, he said, is producing mass hysteria in the United States much more than in neighboring Canada. He added that even Canada has not yet provided a "lend-lease program," but sells munitions to Britain on a cash-and-carry basis.

New Defense Strike Curbs Urged by 20th Century Fund

Provisions for management-workers committees in all defens industries, a Federal emergency mediation board as an agency of final appeal, and a "cooling off" period were proposed yesterday as means of avoiding strikes in the Nation's rearmament drive.

The proposals, by a special committee of the Twentieth Century Fund, came as Federal officials sought to settle numerous labor disputes that have tied up large defense orders and threatened to halt work on others.

Spokesman for the International Harvester Co. and the C. I. O.'s Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee are slated to meet today with Secretary of Labor Perkins in an effort to settle strikes in four I. H. C. plants. At the same time, James F. Dewey, Federal conciliator, will be endeavoring at Detroit to avert a threatened strike of C. I. O. automobile workers at the River Rouge, Lincoln and Highland Park plants of the Ford Motor Co.

Fresh consideration is to be given by Congressional committees this week to various proposals for legislation to curb strikes in plants with defense contracts.

Recommendations of the committee of the Twentieth Century Fund, economic research institute founded by the late Edward A. Filene, of Boston, called for establishment of a national defense labor policy committee of workers and management, to act as supervisor over the management-worker committees in defense industries.

The emergency mediation board would supplement existing conciliation agencies, and there would be in all collective bargaining agreements provisions for mediation and, if possible, for a "cooling off" period before strikes or lockouts.

Committee's Plan

Other points made by the committee's report included these:

Deferment of selective service should be granted skilled workers needed in defense industries.

Effective measures should be taken to prevent any sharp increase in the cost of living.

No attempt should be made to prevent strikes by law.

Competitive bidding for workers in defense industries should be prevented.

Referring to the National Labor Relations Act, the committee asserted:

"The spirit of the statute and a decent respect for prevailing opinion demand, in this period of emergency, universal and ungrudging acceptance by all employers of the processes and implications of collective bargaining.

"This is a vital need in the interest of maximum defense production.

"Any refusal at this time by any employer to accord to labor the full rights of self-organization and collective bargaining stipulated in the act is a dangerouse threat to defense production.

"On the part of labor there is, for the same reasons, a clear obligation to seek the legal remedy in preference to direct action, when confronted with unfair labor practices prohibited by the act.

"All pressure which public opinion can exert is called for to enforce these considerations, to the end that the threat to defense production inherent in this type of labor dispute may be minimized."

Wheeler Hits Aid Bill Aims At Baltimore

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, who recently announced he would carry the lease-lend bill issue to the people, assailed the measure at a mass meeting today and asserted that from his two days of Senate debate on the proposal "I know only about a half-dozen Senators have analyzed it."

He told an audience that packed Mount Vernon Place Methodist Episcopal Church that the measure was "the most dictatorial and asinine piece of legislation ever in Congress in the 18 years I have been there."

Many persons were turned away when the church became filled and during the speech there were several commotions in the crowd outside.

Two men were arrested in the outside crowd and charged with disorderly conduct following a scuffle over a cardboard sign criticizing the Senator.

Wheeler told his audience that the lease-lend bill "would not pass if the people knew what was in it."

"The general mass of the people does not know what is in it," he declared. "From my two days of debate on the floor I know only about a half-dozen Senators have analyzed it."

The meeting was sponsored by the America First Committee.

Equipment Poor, 2 Chiefs Say After Fire

As an aftermath of Saturday's fire in a barracks at Fort Myer, two Arlington County (Va.) fire chiefs yesterday charged their companies were underequipped.

William R. (Honey) Biggs, volunteer chief of the Ballston company, was most vehement. "The hose we had to use at the Fort Myer fire were equipped with spray nozzles and were entirely unsuitable for that kind of fire," he declared.

"As a matter of fact," he added, "a Washington fire official told me I might as well put those nozzles in a bag and throw them in the Potomac, for all the good they would do."

Chief Biggs said he had requested the county six months ago to supply his company with new nozzles, some running clothes and boots, but that the only assurance he could get from county officials was that the supplies were "coming."

The company's regular cut-off nozzles, suitable for fighting a fire such as the one at Fort Myer, had been broken and were sent to the county property yard to be repaired more than six months ago, Biggs said. Now, he added, no one knows what has happened to them.

Another volunteer fire chief, Maynard Saunders, of the Clarendon company, declared that his department had received no equipment from the county "for a long time." The men, he said, had to wear their own clothes when battling a fire because the company hadn't been allotted any running clothes or boots for years.

A. C. Scheffel, paid chief of all the county companies, said he had "no comment to make at this time" in regard to the charges.

Under the present county fire setup, each of five companies have three men who are paid $100 a month out of county funds. The other members of the companies are volunteers. The county owns all the equipment and is supposed to replace it when necessary.

The firehouses are owned by the volunteer groups, who receive rental payments for storing the county equipment and for providing sleeping quarters for the county-paid men. The funds from this source are used mostly for upkeep of the firehouses.

A board of inquiry named by Col. W. W. Gordon, commanding officer at Fort Myer, yesterday continued its investigation of the blaze and also a study of the water supply at the post. District firemen who were called to the fire said they were handicapped by lack of water pressure caused by the small size of the mains.

Col. Gordon said ample accommodations at the post had been found for the 160 men routed by the blaze from the barracks of Battery C of the Sixteenth and Fifty-fifth Field Artillery.

Capt. Robert N. Walker, public relations officer, said it hadn't been definitely established that any soldiers lost their pay in the barracks' fire. If any money was lost, he added, claim will have to be made to a survey board, which will be named to ascertain losses in the blaze.

Death Greets Man Calling On Friend in Dead of Night

By Scott Hart
Staff Correspondent

Amissville, Va., March 2.—Manuel "Dutch" Jenkins, a farmer, was shot to death last night on the back doorstep of his friend and neighbor, Tom Pickett, in the pine woods off a backroad 1 mile from here.

Sheriff B. H. Wayland, of Culpeper County, resting in bed at noon today after nightlong investigations during which Pickett voluntarily gave himself up, surmised that it seems "a case where one man thought he had a right to go in the house and another man thought he had a right to keep him out."

While her husband was in the Culpeper County jail charged with the killing, Mrs. Pickett today told how, in this one instance at least, a householder's age-old problem of what to do about a friend and neighbor who unexpectedly calls for a session of conversation in the night-time was solved by death.

She and Tom Pickett, who is a sawmill workman, happened to hear the clock strike 11, she said in her backyard today, standing near the muddy doorway where Jenkins' body dropped in the gunfire.

The Picketts had been in bed for some time "and it would have been cold getting up," she said.

The knock sounded on the back door. Mrs. Pickett said she thought it was a queer hour for anybody to be calling.

So they got up and went to the window.

Repeating that she "always tries to do right and doesn't want to say anything now against anybody," she had to say, nonetheless, that Jenkins "was pounding on the door." He was told the hour was late and to go away, she remembered.

Then she went into another room on the second floor of the two-story frame house, and there heard the shot.

"I knew he was shot from up above because the bullet struck him on the nose and went down his mouth," said the sheriff.

Jenkins' body fell into a mud puddle beside the back door.

Pickett didn't wait a minute, his wife recalled. He set the 12-gauge shotgun in a corner, put on his overalls and went out to find the sheriff. But en route he encountered a neighbor, A. C. Latham, who phoned Wayland.

Today Mrs. Pickett, who has two children, Catherine, 6, and William, 7, called them in from the woods where they played and wondered what would become of them. She said she felt more sorry for Mrs. Jenkins because she had five children.

"I stayed here all alone with the children after Tom was gone last night," she said. "I was so nervous and flustrated."

Jenkins lives several miles from the Pickett home. "We all knew each other, but that's no time of night to come calling," Mrs. Pickett said.

Police Find Dr. Klemperer

Morristown, N. J., March 2 (AP).—Police today found Dr. Otto Klemperer, 55, noted German composer and symphony conductor, after he disappeared from a sanitarium at Rye, N. Y., in a hotel here.

The conductor, a powerful man 6 feet 5 inches tall, had been in ill health, friends said, since undergoing a brain tumor operation more than a year ago. Dr. Klemperer told police he came here last night with the intention of reentering the Aurora Health Institute here for treatment.

At the institute, it was said, Klemperer had been asked to leave there because of his refusal to obey instructions.

Freedom Can't Live in Want, Forum Agrees

Adequate distribution of her production would make of America a "Utopia" in which the "mass purchasing power could be increased 75 per cent without any foreign trade," Harry Elmer Barnes, writer and lecturer, told a Nation-wide radio audience last night.

Barnes was one of four participants in a debate on "How Can Democracy's Aims Best Be Achieved?" broadcast from the Willard Hotel by the American Forum of the Air. The others were Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois; Representative Thomas H. Eliot (Democrat) of Massachusetts, and C. D. Jackson, president of the Council for Democracy.

All were agreed on the answer in at least one particular—democracy must produce freedom from want.

"The only possible hope of realizing democracy in this country is to revive the New Deal and make it bigger and better," said Barnes. "We may even have to go so far as a New Deck."

Must Stress Free Enterprise

"Our first task . . . is to generate prosperity at home," said Dirksen. "We must preserve the incentives, the rewards, the free enterprise, the freedom from unreasonable restraints and the flexibility which made this a great country and developed the largest measure of prosperity.

"With that, we must develop security for our people. Today jobs, values and the future are so insecure. From this insecurity springs a kind of organized impatience which brings restlessness and conflict. The world situation and the defense effort have made many people forget that our best defense lies in that kind of unity which derives from security and prosperity."

Declared Eliot: "We need to go on trying to bring real opportunity into the lives of those who've never had a chance. We need to go on bringing more security into the lives of ordinary everyday Americans—those average families who try to live on less than $1,600 a year.

"For if, in the name of national defense we impair civil liberty and destroy the hopes of the masses of the people, what then are we defending?"

Cautions Against Hysteria

"We must further the social gains which this Nation has achieved," Jackson stated. "We cannot let the pressure of this crisis extinguish the rights of labor, of the businessman and of the individual. We must keep hysteria from leading us into the ways of prejudice and disunity."

Dirksen and Eliot clashed when Dirksen declared the aid-Britain bill would make President Roosevelt a dictator. Eliot declared that the bill, by blocking Nazi domination of the world, would insure perpetuation of democracy.

Scoring indiscriminate use in recent public debates of such terms as "dictator" and "appeaser," Dirksen declared: "One of the surest ways to destroy democracy is to go off the rational base and call each other names."

Barnes contended that American democracy is so far from perfect that under certain State criminal syndicalism laws Thomas Jefferson could be arrested for reading the Declaration of Independence.

Theodore Granik was moderator of the broadcast.

Fort Meade Ready if Fire Strikes There

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., March 2.—Fire such as destroyed a barracks at Fort Myer, Va., yesterday apparently would have little opportunity of developing here.

Facilities for fighting fire have kept step with the rapid expansion of this post, according to Lieut. Col. David H. Finley, fire marshal. This applies, he said, not only to Fort Meade proper, but to the new wooden cantonment where the Twenty-ninth Division, composed of nearly 10,000 former Guardsmen from Virginia, Maryland and the District of Columbia, is camped.

Under Col. Finley, fire protection is intrusted to a civilian chief and three assistant chiefs, two of whom are on duty at all times, one at the central station, and one in the Twenty-ninth area. At the central station are three pumpers attended by two noncommissioned officers and 18 privates. Two substations, each manned by a noncommissioned officer and nine privates, are in the cantonment, and others are to be built. Each of these is equipped with a pumper and a chemical truck with 800 feet of additional hose.

Each barracks building has two soda-acid type extinguishers on each of its two floors and each mess hall is equipped with two of the same type. In addition, each kitchen has a foam-type extinguished for battling grease fires.

Water, with fire hydrants scattered throughout the fort, is pumped by two 24-hour stations from the Little Patuxent River into two large tanks, to which a third, even larger, will shortly be added. Col. Finley said water mains and feeder lines are adequate to meet any demand.

In addition to this protection, sentries walk post day and night in all occupied sections of the fort. Tent camps in the old part of Fort Meade, when occupied, have fire screens on their stovepipes and fire guards are detailed in addition to the regular sentries.

Army Refers Raid Inquiries To British

Individuals seeking advice on what to do to prepare for possible future air raids in the United States were referred by the Army yesterday to publications of the British and Canadian governments.

The War Department reported readiness to advise local authorities and industrial plant owners on air raid and other precautions to be taken in the event of war, but individuals are being told, it was said, that the Army has no printed material on the subject for general distribution at this time.

A mass of scientific advice is available, it was suggested, from the British Library of Information in New York City.

The statement was occasioned by numerous inquiries which followed a recommendation by the recent National Conference of Mayors that the Government prepare and distribute air raid precaution advice.

The department also made clear its policy that "in the all important field of plant protection, the primary responsibility should be placed upon plant management and the local authorities."

It cited an address by John Lord O'Brian, special assistant to the Attorney General for war work, in which he told the National Conference of Mayors:

"It would be impossible for the FBI, for the Army or the Navy to attempt to assume the responsibility for physical protection to plants, however important to the protection of airplanes and war materials." He declared it was the duty of plant executives "to study their own employes and to take every possible precaution against sabotage or subversive activities."

The Department listed documents available at the British Library in New York, under these headings:

Personal Protection Against Gas, First Aid and Nursing for Gas Casualties, Decontamination of Materials, Structural Precautions Against Bombs and Gas, Air Raid Precautions in Factories and Business Premises, Anti-Gas Precautions for Merchant Shipping, Duties of Air Raid Wardens, Rescue Parties and Clearance of Debris, Fire Protection—Hints to Householders, Fire Precautions in Schools, Fire Protection Requirements in Theaters and Places of Entertainment, and General Information for Civil Authorities.

Alexandria.

At the Alexandria Hospital, where he was taken by a passing motorist, Downs was said to be suffering from head injuries and a broken collarbone.

Alfred F. Todd, 17, also of Route 3, Alexandria, said by police to have been driving the car, escaped uninjured. The other car, police said, was driven by Arthur Peeler, colored, of near Alexandria, who was unhurt.

In an accident in Washington yesterday, Daniel Dupree, colored, 19, of 1348 C Street Northeast, was injured when his motorcycle collided with an automobile at Fourteenth and Decatur Streets Northwest. He was treated at Emergency Hospital for an injured right shoulder.

2 Hurt as Truck Upsets

Two men were hurt, perhaps critically, when locked inside the driver's cabin of an overturned trailer truck near Wheaton, Md., shortly before midnight last night.

The men, taken to the Washington Sanitarium by the Silver Spring Rescue Squad, were Fred Gilmore and Al Speight, both of High Point, N. C. Their specific injuries were not immediately known.

A member of the rescue squad said one of the men told him a locked wheel forced the truck off the highway. As the huge trailer, loaded with builders' supplies, turned on its side, the motor and drivers' compartment was partially buried in a muddy embankment.

William Webb Zeller, 3221 Twentieth Street Northeast, premedical student at George Washington University, was elected president of the North Atlantic region of the Lutheran Student Association of America, which closed a two-day conference here yesterday by attending communion service in the Church of the Reformation.

The election was held at a conference banquet Saturday night at the Ebbitt Hotel. Approximately 300 students, representing 100 colleges and universities in the region, attended the conference.

Zeller, a junior at George Washington, is university program director.

Jewish Women Hear Talk by Baukhage

Objective reporting for the press and radio is becoming more difficult under the stress of the war abroad and defense preparations at home, H. R. Baukhage, N. B. C. news analyst, yesterday told the Washington section, National Council of Jewish Women and Juniors.

The three major obstacles to objective news reporting, he said, are personal prejudices, public prejudices and propaganda.

Elevator Pitfall Injures Hallman

A 56-year-old colored man, John Ware, of 24 Q Street Northwest, was taken to Emergency Hospital early yesterday for injuries sustained when he fell into an elevator pit at 1623 K Street Northwest.

Police said Ware was attempting to get out of the elevator, which was struck between the second and third floors, when the accident occurred. He was treated for injuries to the left leg, hips and back. Ware is employed as a hallman at the K Street address.

Church Youths Hear Plea for Social Action

A conference of young Methodists—organized to make the church an active force in the political and sociological problems — yesterday heard from Bishop Adna Wright Leonard, of Washington, a plea for union of everyday life and religious faith.

Addressing the second annual meeting of young adults of the Baltimore Conference of the Methodist Church, Bishop Leonard urged preparation for the day when many of the young men of the Nation will return from Army training camps.

That day, he said, will test the ability of religion and its leaders to relate religious faith to life to make faith a real and important factor.

The conference, held in the Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 900 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, received from Walter A. Graham, conference director, an outline of a program for "social action."

Graham urged study of the "spiritual, physicial and social needs" of persons in the church community. "Find out how they live," he pleaded, "and do something about it."

Bishop Leonard received preliminary reports on the Methodist drive to raise $1,000,000 for war relief and for Army camp service. While returns from a special "Day of Compassion" offering taken in all Methodist churches in the United States will not be known for several days, Bishop Leonard said seven out of ten reports from local pastors showed collections to have been above quota.

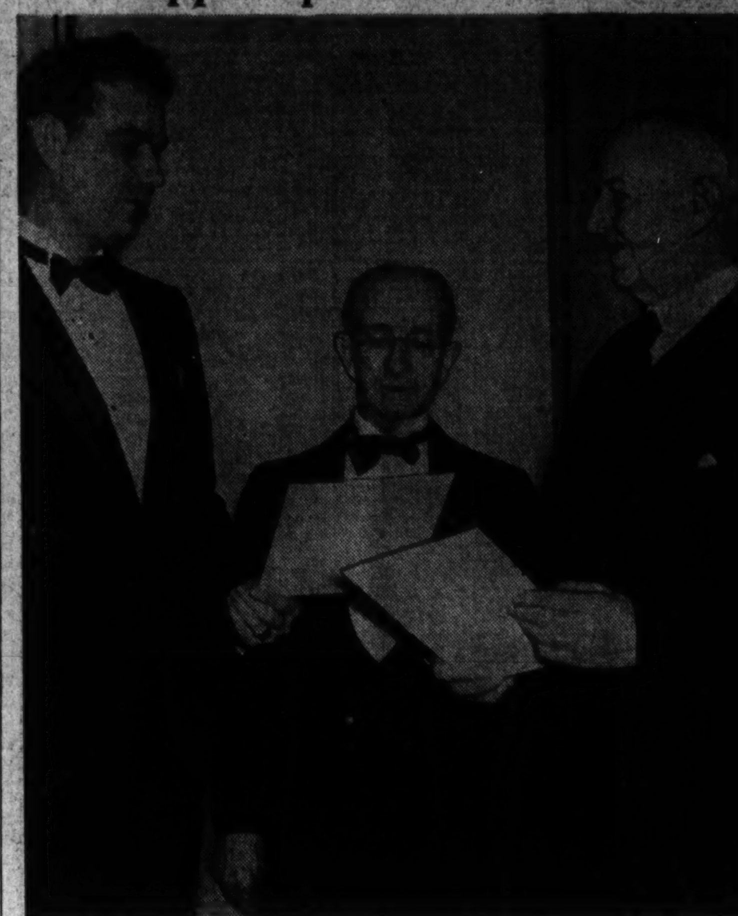

Bishop Leonard described as "marvelous" the response from Washington churches which have a total quota of $50,000. The results of the drive here will be known following a meeting of Methodist ministers in the Methodist Building at 11 a. m. today.

One-quarter of the funds raised will be used for British Methodism, an equal amount for work in Army training camps in this country and one-half for the relief of war-stricken populations in Europe and Asia.

The meeting yesterday was attended by the following conference and district officers:

Walter A. Graham, conference director; Margaret Wallace, curriculum chairman; G. Allison Long, fellowship chairman; Sadie Rice, secretary; Elizabeth C. Pile, treasurer; William S. Brown, chairman of social action committee; Sue Retalliata, director of the South Baltimore District; the Rev. Ralph W. Wott, director of the West Baltimore District; Mrs. Ruth Brown, director, East Washington District; Grover L. Hartman, director, West Washington District; Mrs. Evelyn Ebersole, Williamsport, Md., Martinsburg director; Grace Williams, Cumberland director.

Consolidation Of U. S. Farm Agencies Asked

By Edwin B. Haakinson
Associated Press Staff Writer

A contention that so many separate Government agencies deal with the farmer and his problems that they cause "unnecessary duplication of effort, waste, extravagance and confusion" came yesterday from the American Farm Bureau Federation.

Edward A. O'Neal, president of the federation, proposed that many existing agencies be consolidated and a five-men, nonpartisan board be created to coordinate the whole farm program. He said his proposals and criticisms would be carried to proper Congressional committees.

Listing more than a dozen agencies or divisions now dealing with farm programs, O'Neal said they employed 33,556 "permanent employes" last year and spent $99,293,429 on administrative costs.

Most administrative costs, he asserted, were deducted from funds which otherwise would go to farmers as benefit payments, loans or grants.

We believe that unless various phases of the program are administered with efficiency and economy," he declared, "that eventually the bulk of the farmers will reject the program, which will then fall of its own weight."

The Farm Bureau Federation is one of the largest national farm organizations and has cooperated closely with most New Daal farm activities.

O'Neal made clear that he was not criticizing the objectives of these activities, but only the administrative set up and the "enormous amount of unnecessary expense" which he said had resulted.

He said the expenses of county associations required only 2.47 per cent deductions from benefit checks to farmers between 1933 and 1935, then rose to 8.33 per cent in 1937, and had exceeded 6 per cent in succeeding years.

In a written outline of his criticisms, O'Neal said:

"There are seven agencies that have direct relationship to and contacts with farmer committees in the States.

"Five agencies that are assisting farmers with farm management problems.

"Five agencies dealing with landlord-tenant relationships.

"Four agencies engaged in demonstrations of farming methods.

"Seven agencies engaged in land-use planning.

"Four agencies directly engaged in promoting programs to conserve the soil and improve fertility and to encourage terracing.

"Five agencies assisting farmers with woodland planting and forest conservation.

"Six agencies are engaged in water conservation.

"Assistance with marketing problems is given by five agencies.

"Five agencies helping farmers carry out grazing improvement programs.

"At least three agencies are assisting farm women with home management problems."

FATHER NEPTUNE'S A SIREN. Every day in every way the Neptune Room seems to become more fascinating. The new diversion crew arriving last Saturday had all good Neptuners waving their ears and popping their eyes with pleasure. There's Lina D'Acosta, the Mexican tamale, whose voice and anatomy are both alluringly undulent. And the tremendous Dalton Boys—Kelly, who looks like Brian Dunlevy, of the "Dalton Boys" movie; Pete, who's almost a twin of The Post's radio editor, Dick Coe; Jack, who looks like himself. They have a thousand songs, but be sure to catch their "Eagle Eye Finkle." Also, and very specially, those splendid pianists, Bob and Bertie Hellman, adepts in brilliant harmony. Bob and Bertie have a complex that reminds of "Mr. and Mrs. Smith" at Keith's. They were married in Shanghai and their marriage certificate is entirely in unreadable Chinese. Sometimes they wonder if they're really married. "That thing might be just a title to the Buick," says Bertie.

The Unready Republic—Nostalgia for 'Old Days' Rules Economic Thought

Majority Wants U. S. Policies Shaped To Restore Frontier Era, Writer Finds

By Duncan Aikman

Sixth in a Series on American Defense
Copyright, 1941, by the Newspaper PM, Inc.

Practically everywhere I went in the United States I found a surprising number of people looking backward toward something. It wasn't a trait that cropped out just among the rich, the coddy-off and the temperamental reactionaries. The hard-up people had just as much of it, and so even did many of the "progressives."

Although these groups were not all interested in the same landscapes behind their shoulders, they all agreed on two points in broad general terms: That the United States was "once upon a time"—generally within their living memories—a better place to live in than it is now. And that the quickest way to establish the "good life" in America is to restore these agreeable conditions as far as possible. To put 131,000,000 people on the trail, as it were, of their lost social and economic innocence.

I could make two or three articles I suppose, just cataloguing all the ideas that were suggested to me up these—should I say back-alleys?

Out in the farm country nostalgia comes, for instance, in terms of land prices. "Things were reasonably all right out here," the men told me in various farmers' beer joints from Indiana to the Dakotas, "when a fellow could get hold of his own farm and work it for something less than three times his life savings. If we could just get the water out of land values that the old World War and the banks and the insurance companies have put into it, a tenant would have some chance of buying his own farm and getting along pretty well, even nowadays."

"Could Always Get a Job"

Then, once or twice I was told that even getting along without a farm wasn't so bad in "the good old days." "A good man could always count on getting a steady job as a farm hand," a weather-bitten middle-aged migratory farm laborer from Kansas assured me over hot dogs in a California road stand. "But with all these trick machines in the grain country, the farm hand who gets two months work a year these days is lucky. I don't see what good the machines do, either," he added, "when they put so many of us in the fix I'm in."

Again, up at the top of the steep stairs of the economic hierarchy the business and industrial leaders wanted certain familiar conveniences back—notably, their old freedom of action and their "good old fashioned" money. This country "ran like a breeze," they said, when the businessman who "made money" could invest it as he pleased, and no silly questions asked, no expensive red tape demanded, or no dangerous penalties threatened by the Government.

The country always "pulled out" of its depressions, when you knew exactly how much gold you could get for a dollar and governments made it their business to balance budgets. Why weren't we working back toward these conditions, then, which every respectable grandfather recognized were necessary to make a country grow and prosper—and to incite solid businessmen to save and invest and so perpetually renew the prosperity cycles?

In between the upper and lower brackets, people also were shouting for the return of antique economic adjustments. In many ways, industrial workers were less homesick for "the good old days" than most groups. They realized what unions had gained for them in better pay and hours and legalized collective bargaining rights. But while organization was winning these advantages, other factors on the labor front, particularly man-displacing machinery, were taking away other advantages.

"Ruin" Seen in Chain Stores

A fellow once "bettered himself," factory workers were constantly telling me, by taking chances and moving from job to job. Now, in the big automatic factories one job was just like another in its opportunities for "advancement," provided, when you left one town for another, you could even get a job. And in the skilled mechanic brackets, workers wished the cost of machinery were less, so it would be "easy for a guy to start his own litle shop somewhere, the way the oldtimers did."

Small businessmen, on the other hand, complained to me about how the chain stores were "ruining" their towns and the monopolies, or near-monopolies of the national product manufacturers were ruining their personal fortunes. The Republic's prosperity started from the grassroots, they philosophized. So, what it needed to restore its economic soul was for them to get their old chances back of free-for-all competition with equals.

Running through all the groups and on every street corner—not to mention around numerous de luxe night club tables—were various brands of nostalgic moralists. Their dates differed, but the moralists were agreed that at some time in the recent past, either at the turn of the century, with the World War, or at the coming of relief payments during the depression, the oncoming generations of the Republic had "gone soft." They had lost their faith in the "old-time religion" of America—the economic and political "unchurched" religion discussed in yesterday's article—and so had lost ambition, "stick-to-itiveness," saving habits, the morale to fight their way up in the world. So, what was needed, the moralists proclaimed to me, was a national revival of faith which would make Americans of the 1940s feel about their chances precisely as the Americans of the 1870s did, regardless of personal experiences and the evidence.

Extends to Foreign Policy

And another sort of nostalgia spilled over into controversies over specific public affairs. Hadn't we kept out of European wars from 1812 to 1917, my isolationist friends challenged me, simply by minding our own business and turning our backs on Europe's balance of power struggles? All right, then, couldn't we keep out of trouble abroad in the 1940's, simply by looking at World War II as strictly a foreigners' sporting event?

But so were many of the aid-for-Britain enthusiasts whom I met, harking backward rather than forward in their chief objectives. They wanted a British victory, or even intervention, if necessary to be sure of one. But not to establish New World economic arrangements geared to the power age. My finest nostalgiacs wanted it simply out of a sharp and anxious hope that British victory would enable the old "free enterprise" system of the Anglo-Saxon world to function again as it did before 1914.

For that matter, even the youngest generations had more or less nostalgia. It constantly came out when I told young journalism students—a little inconsiderately, perhaps—the highly prosaic story of how I got my first newspaper job. I had nothing to recommend me except a college diploma and the fact that I had been fired from a boys' school teaching job for being no good at keeping classroom discipline. But I put in my application with a newspaperman's employment agency, and in a week was offered three jobs. And then took a fourth which showed up through a friend on the Springfield Republican.

"My God," the young men and women would sigh at this 1912 labor market idyll, "will me ever have a world like that back again?" I didn't, in other words, find in any of these more or less significant groups, any open disposition to organize new social and economic arrangements for a changed American society. Most of the people who were troubled by the changes admitted that they had happened and that they were deep and vital. But the remedy which nearly all of the sufferers proposed was, by one prescription or another, to revive the United States—the American society—that used to be, and make it function again in the ways that grandfather was used to.

New Deal, Infected, Too

Even the New Deal's course, at the very height of its "radicalism," was set by these essentially nostalgic compass points. It proposed to tax and spend and give relief and doctor the currency, not really to build a better distribution system, but to "prime the pump" so that eventually—barring a few restraints on its wickeder impulses—the old "free enterprise" system would function pretty much as it did in Mark Hanna's day.

All these hundreds of people I swapped ideas with, talked in fact, a good deal as if the republic had had a happy childhood—which, considering the world's best frontiers to picnic in and the way its money allowances and living standards were raised every few years, it certainly did—and, now that it was in trouble, had better hurry back to the sheltering aprons of old values and customs. And, it is all quite humanly understandable.

Just as it is understandable that individuals often long for home and mother when in sorrow or in jail.

Still, a nation in search of its youth is likely to be blind to the realities of the problems of its maturity. So I found the majority of the nostalgia addicts less interested in what the United States is today and what it may be growing into, than in—well, hiding behind implausible hopes and antique traditions and virtues.

Well-to-do nostalgiacs, for instance, often got angry at the mere mention of the possibility that the Republic eventually may have to find jobs and high purchasing power for men displaced by automatic machinery. These man-displacements have been going on ever since the beginning of the industrial age, they roared at me. I know that sooner or later new industries come along to take up such slacks in employment? That new industries, as a rule, adopt man-displacing machines even faster than the established ones simply didn't interest them. Let government take its hands off business, they growled to me with indignant simplicity, and we'll start the new industries and show you.

New Frontiers Violened

Neither would they face the evidence that gold standard, inelastic currency systems might not indefinitely support a power-age economy in a highly industrialized nation with static frontiers and population. The idea that more supple currencies might be built on the productive power of peoples struck them as simple madness.

Few of them, for that matter, would realistically admit even that the frontiers were gone. The did, of course, see that there would be no more consequential population and purchasing power increases in continental United States due to bringing new lands under the plow. But new industries would take over the functions of the old frontiers in the national economy, they more or less universally assured me—be, for all practical effects, our "new frontiers."

So they reasoned in nostalgic circles. Give them their "sound money" back, their freedom from Government interference, from relief taxes and from all this chatter about "technological unemployment," and they would make a world, which was so much like the early America of the old land exploitation days that you would never realize he mere farmland frontiers were even missing.

So, on similar and less concentric circles, they reasoned about war preparations and defense programs. The war and defense programs were all right in their way, they admitted. Rightly administered, they could be "good for business." But defense programs should be carried out with a minimum of taxation and new regimentations and government control. For, if at the end of the war or the crisis, business didn't emerge with better credit balances, a better profit status, and more "freedom of enterprise" rather than more "socialization," what good would defense programs have done the country

Tenants Share Belief

Defense orders were simply, from the nostalgic viewpoint, so many billions of new business to be superimposed on — and to strengthen—"business as usual." If they didn't help the Republic to discover its lost economic youth, what was there really worth defending?

But this passion for making old arrangements work is by no means a special province of the upper crusts. I found tenant farmers and sharecroppers more interested in making farm ownership easy than in getting a bigger share of the national income for themselves as tenants and sharecroppers. I found small businessmen more interested in cutting down big business to their own competitive size than in coordinating small business operations to make equivalent profits with big business. Even the job-worried young school of journalism undergraduates, I suspected, spent considerably more time wishing that the several thousand newspapers dead or merged during the last few decades could be brought back to life or unmerged, than they did in planning new forms of journalism which would give talented young men and women a chance.

If this convicts me of being a notsalgic moralist, make the most of it. But you don't dispose of the nostalgia which controls so many American attitudes toward social and economic change today, that easily.

Here, on our land mass, the 131,000,000 of us face, like it or not, one of the greatest coordination problems in human history: Not of coordinating a defense system only but of coordinating productive capacity and purchasing power and technical processes so that 131,000,000 people can "live better."

How are we going to do our coordinating then, with somewhere between two-thirds and nine-tenths of our minds on the arrangements which enabled us to live fairly well on an expanding-frontier economy 50 or 100 years ago. Not even a self-sufficient Republic can ease itself into a functioning power-age economy by sleigh riding "over the river and far away" to grandmother's house.

BACK OF YOUR TELEPHONE

Few realize the army of workers and the extensive property needed to furnish telephone service . . .

MOSTLY UNSEEN, but here, there and everywhere—in homes, office and public buildings, underground and overhead—is the telephone system dedicated to the service of Greater Washington.

Here are nineteen telephone buildings. With the central office equipment they contain these buildings cost something more than $26,000,000. Add to this the rest of the plant—telephones, switchboards, cables, conduit, poles and wire—and the total aggregates about $63,000,000, most of it the savings of thousands of individuals invested in an essential public service.

Price Rise Mars Building Boom, Jones Reports

Secretary of Commerce Jones said yesterday that rising costs "constitute a nunfavorable factor" in an otherwise attractive prospect for 1941 construction activity. "Further advances may prevent the full potentialities of the situation from being realized," he said in a statement.

"A large volume of unfilled contracts for all types of construction was carried over from last year," Jones said, "and despite smaller defense awards in January, total awards continue to run well ahead of 1940."

He described the private residential construction outlook as favorable, with indications that the total would exceed the $2,200,000,000 of building in 1930 unless affected adversely by higher costs or restrictions resulting from the national defense program.

Group Asks Income Tax Holiday on March 15

New York, March 2 (AP).—The defense committee of the Smaller Business Association for New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, Inc., asked President Roosevelt today to proclaim March 15, final day for payment of 1940 income taxes, as "Democracy Day."

The organization suggested the day be observed as a holiday as far as possible "to let the world know that America is for total defense and the inherent right of being free men regardless of temporary cost and to tell the world that here is one country which will not only pay defense taxes but pay them with a cheer."

PALE, TIRED WOMEN

Supply the Blood and Nerves with Iron and Vitamin B1

Thousands of women and girls over 14 are not getting enough iron to make rich red blood, and not enough Vitamin B1 for proper functioning of the nerves.

When the iron lost each month is not replaced, these women often feel tired, could worn out. They have pale lips and pale cheeks. Their shortage of Vitamin B1 affects the nerves, dulls the appetite, and disturbs digestion. These women should try ENRICH, the tasty new preparation which supplies extra iron and Vitamin B1. No habit-forming drugs, no alcohol, no liver.

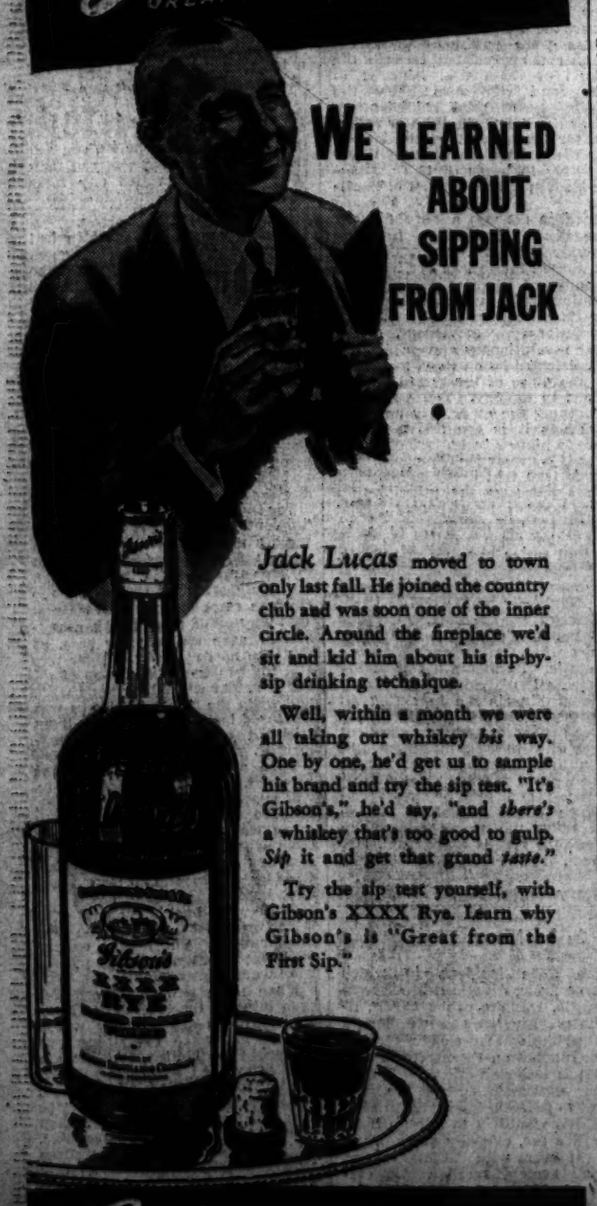

Each day's ENRICH furnishes more iron for the blood than 4 pounds of beefsteak or 7 heads of spinach. And more Vitamin B1 than ½ pound of baker's yeast. Best of all, ENRICH tastes good and costs only a few cents daily.

When iron is restored to the blood and the body is fully supplied with Vitamin B1, it usually follows that good color comes back to the cheeks and lips, appetite returns, nerves function better, and you feel peppy again. We will refund your money unless two boxes of ENRICH satisfactorily helps you feel better, look better, eat better, and sleep better. Start now!

Camp Hazards

The $100,000 fire at Fort Myer opens up the whole question of water supply and fire fighting facilities at military camps. District firemen cited the small size of water mains as one cause for the extent of damage. In one instance only a trickle could be obtained from the hose, and it was said the pipes would not admit water as fast as modern pumpers work. There is reason to believe that the mains supplying Fort Myer out of the District system have not been increased in proportion to the great recent growth of the post.

The fear of what might happen elsewhere if a blaze got out of control among crowded wooden barracks is bound to arise out of the Fort Myer fire. In the case of Fort Meade, which houses the District National Guard, the question can be answered with immediate satisfaction. Fort Meade has two pumping stations which draw water out of the Little Patuxent River. There are two large standing tanks and a third is under construction. Mains have been altered with the expansion of the camp and modern hydrants are placed throughout the National Guard area. The main post fire station has three pumper trucks. Each of the two substations in the National Guard area has a heavy pumper and a chemical and ladder truck. Forces are kept on duty to operate all this apparatus. In addition, each barracks is well equipped with extinguishers and sentries stand guard at all times.

When the two additional substations for the National Guard have been installed, it is hard to see how a fire could make much headway at Fort Meade. However, the investigation under way at Fort Myer should inspire similar check-ups at camps everywhere, especially at old cantonments to which new barracks have been added. The best time to survey facilities is before, not after, a fire.

Mobilizing Steel

Gano Dunn's impartial and authoritative report on the productive capacity of the steel industry should give a quietus to a contentious argument. Mr. Dunn says that existing facilities are adequate to satisfy the heavy requirements of the U. S. and British defense programs as well as expanding civilian demands. He concludes that if certain measures are taken ingot productive capacity will exceed total requirements by over 10,000,000 tons this year and by more than 2,000,000 tons in 1942. The recent hullabaloo is doubtless due to a pressure of forward buying which created a mistaken impression that the industry was not geared to meet the demands of the present emergency.

If maximum production is to be reached and maintained, however, Mr. Dunn points out that orders must be distributed evenly among producers. They must not be permitted to pile up in one place when another producer is operating at less than capacity for lack of orders. We ourselves have stressed this point since defense work got under way. The industry must function to a large extent as if it were an integrated unit to assure maximum utilization of all existing capacity. If necessary adjustments cannot be effected by voluntary action, Mr. Dunn recommends that the director of the Division of Priorities should become responsible for any required shifting of orders. An arrangement of this kind—whether voluntary or compulsory—would prevent the construction of new plants so long as existing equipment is available for use.

It is more economical (and certainly less time-consuming) to use the productive equipment we have than to divert labor and capital into the construction of additional facilities that are almost certain to become superfluous when the emergency is over. It is encouraging to be told that, with a reasonable amount of voluntary cooperation aided by intelligent planning, the steel industry should be able to meet the extraordinary demands of the present emergency with the equipment on hand. But it would be even more encouraging to hear that steps had been taken to adopt Mr. Dunn's recommendations.

Opposition Oratory

The decision to begin the Senate debates on the lend-lease bill an hour earlier should serve to speed up the voting stage. After all, Senatorial eloquence is not inexhaustible. Sometimes it may have seemed as if the opposition had secreted a miraculous pitcher out of which to draw sustenance for hours-long speeches. But that is only an illusion. The pitcher is human, and one of these volcanic days the very last word will have been said pro or con. Whereupon the Senate, so many members of which are the more eager to vote now that the conqueror is again on the move, will be enabled to do its constitutional duty of passing upon this momentous measure.

The opposition cannot complain of the hospitality of the Senate. Three to one is said to be the ratio in time consumed by the critics as against the backers of the lend-lease bill. Yet the oppositionists are in the minority. The supporters might be even more charitable about the disparity if the other side had made some adequate recompense in debate. The contrary, however, is the case. Of late the critics of the measure have been generating far more heat than light, and they have traveled far afield from the subject matter. Not for one moment would we suggest that the opposition is holding the Senatorial function and the electorate in such contempt as to indulge in plain obstructionism. Nor should the wordage be put down merely to the exuberance of Senatorial verbosity. Oh no! Oppositionists, of course, are anxious to get on the record in the event that time will prove them on the side of the angels.

Time, however, has already rendered its verdict. This is the reason that to the public at large the anti-bill oratory is sound and fury signifying nothing except the everlastingness of free debate. On the oppositionist roll are names which are associated in the public memory with votes and opinions cast against defense appropriations, for the Johnson Act, against the repeal of the arms embargo, against the prescience of the President in foreign affairs. These votes and opinions stand like ghosts behind the shoulders of the oppositionists as they fulminate against the lend-lease bill. There is only one thing to do with time in a world menaced by global gangsterism, and that is to take it by the forelock.

The Poetry Readings

The interest shown the other evening in the Library of Congress in the reading by Mr. Robinson Jeffers of some of his own poetry astonished no less than it delighted those who had sponsored and organized the series. Invitations to this first of a series of readings had been generously distributed. Yet it was not anticipated that the auditorium would be more than comfortably filled. The response, however, was so great that the crowd on hand overflowed into the adjoining rooms of the Whitall poetry pavilion, whither Mr. Jeffers' voice was conducted by an amplifying system. This turnout was the more surprising because Mr. Jeffers, though ranked by most critics as one of our major living poets, has scarcely been considered a popular poet. Moreover, this was his first platform appearance. A third reason was that there is a widespread belief among publishers that the field for books of poetry grows narrower every year. Some critics, like Mr. Edmund Wilson, have even prophesied that poetry as a form of literary expression will soon disappear because most of its special virtues have already been taken over by prose. It may be, however, that the number of persons who are willing to listen to poetry is many times greater than the number willing to read it. This is natural enough, since in the beginning poetry was intended not for the eye, but for the ear. Perhaps the power which the poet once exerted over the emotions of the masses, and which he gradually lost after the invention of printing, will, in this age of radio, be restored to him.

Large Order

The cool extension of Japan's New Order to the vast sub-continent of Oceania puts a new light on the population argument in Japan. When Nipponese statesmen argued that Japan simply had to expand its territories because Japan was bursting with excess of population, what they should have said was that Japan simply had to expand its population to expand its territories. As the quasi-official Domei News Agency explains, "Japan has a mission to construct East Asia in a sphere of prosperity and attain continuous expansion. To realize this mission it is necessary to achieve a rapid and perpetual increase in population." Mr. Kenichi Kumagaye is even more to the point. Planes and tanks, he says, are no good unless you have lots and lots of men, too.

This is something that the Japanese people themselves have until now apparently not understood. Anyhow, the Japanese birth rate has fallen from 34.6 per thousand in 1921 to about 27 per thousand in 1938. In the same years the birth rate in the United States fell from 22.5 to 17.9. To be sure, the death rate in the United States is also well below Japan's, with or without counting all the men killed in the Chinese War. But even so, there is something disturbing in the comparison. For should the Japanese people now reproduce at the rate their government expects of them, and should the American birth rate continue its present decline, the point is not too distant when there will be more Japanese with a mission than Americans to resist them. Still, there is a long way to go before Japan yields another 600,000,000—the number which Mr. Matsuoka says Oceania has room for.

Balkan Chances

A year ago there were six independent nations in southeastern Europe. Two of them, Hungary and Bulgaria, leaned to the Axis; two others, Rumania and Greece, had accepted British and French guarantees to help them if they became victims of aggression; Turkey had voluntarily gone over into the Allied camp; Yugoslavia, wedged in between Italy and the Reich, tried to remain aloof from the opposing combinations. All of them were anxious to stay out of war and remain free. And in early 1940 Hitler's primary interest, so far as the Balkans were concerned, was to keep them at peace, so that an uninterrupted flow of foodstuffs and raw materials would continue between the nations in that area and Germany. Those earmarked as his next victims were the Scandinavian kingdoms of Denmark and Norway and the Low Countries.

But in recent months, as the victory which loomed so near after the fall of France had begun to recede into the distance, as Germany's Italian partner suffered a succession of disasters in Greece, Albania and Africa, and as the day drew nearer when an all-out attack on Great Britain could no longer be postponed, Hitler started to abandon his do-nothing policy toward southeastern Europe. Hungary was brought into camp and forced to sign the German-Italian-Japanese alliance. Rumania was subjected to partitioning, and then occupied by the German army. And now, with the consent of the Sofia government and parliament, Bulgaria's independence has been destroyed. At present, therefore, only three independent nations are left in southeastern Europe, and each faces a situation of extraordinary difficulty.

With German troops in Bulgaria, German pressures on Greece, whose heroic and successful struggle against the Italian invaders has won for her the admiration of the world, are certain to increase. There can be no doubt that Hitler will do everything possible to bring about an end to the Italo-Greek war. Whether, in the event his demand is rejected, he will go further and invade Greece depends very largely on Turkey. If Turkey is prepared to throw her weight into the scales on the side of Greece, help may be forthcoming, not only from Great Britain but also from Yugoslavia. At least such a development would undoubtedly increase the Belgrade government's determination not to permit Yugoslavia to become a corridor—and it happens to be the only real corridor—for the passage of German troops moving in the direction of the Aegean. If, however, Turkey decides to remain entirely behind her own frontier, the plight of Greece will be serious, and so will that of Yugoslavia. The last thing Hitler wants is to wage a war on two fronts. It is certain, accordingly, that he will try in every possible way to intimidate Turkey and Yugoslavia and Greece through the threat of force rather than the application of force. For once war begins in the Balkans, there is no telling how far it will spread or how fiercely it will rage.

Hitler's technique of conquest in the Balkans has followed familiar lines. He overcame his victims one by one. Hungary's adhesion to the Axis made possible the peaceful conquest of Rumania, and this was the prelude to the action of Bulgaria in placing herself at Germany's disposal. But the sacrifice of independence made by those hapless nations may not mean that they will be spared the ravages of war. The possibility remains that Bulgaria and Rumania may yet become battlefields, and the reported R. A. F. bombing of the Rumanian oil center at Ploesti may be a straw in the wind.

Strikes In Defense

A year ago we were reading a great deal in the papers about "Fifth Column Activities" and what they have accomplished in Norway, Holland, France and Belgium. It would seem as though the citizens of this country had become pretty much enlightened on the subject. Yet today we see a succession of strikes in all kinds of factories manufacturing airplanes, munitions, Army and Navy supplies of every description, all of which strikes tend to slow up the preparation for national defense, and enormously to increase the cost of the same. Is one being unduly suspicious if it seems to him that Nazi agents and Nazi money are probably back of a large number of these strikes? This is exactly in line with Nazi policy and is the most effective way to slow up the whole defense program.

Sabotage and wrecking of plants involve certain dangers, even in this country, but the instigation of strikes involves apparently no risk whatever, and, in fact, many think that the whole policy of the Administration for years has been rather to encourage strikes, or, at any rate, not to discourage them.

FRANK N. NAY.
Boston, Mass., Feb. 28.

The lend-lease bill when passed will grant quite a few new powers to the President. Whether or not these extended powers are necessary to facilitate aid to Britain I am not qualified to decide. However, regardless of how effective the lend-lease bill could be it would accomplish little if industrial strikes slow up the flow of war materials.

Since the President asks for sweeping powers to get our war materials transferred to the fighting democracies, why doesn't he ask for the power to prohibit strikes in the defense industries? With the exception of union agitators the people would gladly grant this authority.

Ministers And The War

I have at hand a letter from the "Ministers' No War Committee" of Chicago, Ill. The letter implores one to help defeat the present lease-lend bill in Congress and prevent the American aid to the democracies now fighting for their existence. They implore me to write, wire or phone the Virginia delegation in Congress to urge them to oppose and vote against this bill.

I have already written to the Virginia delegation, imploring them to move heaven and earth to rush speedy and immediate aid to England, as this bill is supposed to do. Do these ministers know that the Axis powers are fighting against everything that Christianity stands for? Why are they opposing help to Britain? Have they lost faith in Christianity? Are there no Christians in Norway, in Denmark, in Holland, in Belgium, in France and in England that are supposed to be the brothers of these ministers?

Of Modern Art

As one who has been a student of modern art, I have come to the conclusion that this so-called "Modern Art" so common in contemporary art exhibits is just an excuse for bad drawing. While it is true there are a few harmless nuts who are sincere in their drawing of distortions, for the average individual interested in painting, such portraying of distortion is obviously the insincere pursuit of a "fad."

The fathers of modern art, Cezanne, Gaugin, Van Gogh, and the rest made a real contribution to art because they were original and independent. The great sin committed against art in the name of art in this contemporary time is insincerity and refusal of artists to be true to themselves in their art. We are living in an artistically sterile age because there are too many third rate would-be Van Goghs, Cezannes, and Picassos. Because the merits of these artists' works were posthumously recognized and appreciated through the efforts of those who believed in them and who also knew the psychology of good salesmanship, it has become the fashion or rather fad for the general public, including themselves, to think of Great Art only in terms of this particular Modern French School of Painting.

Modern art was a revolutionary movement designed to free the individual artist to paint the way he wanted to—to free art from the tyranny of sloppy sentiment in painting which was so popular at the time Cezanne lived. But this revolutionary movement, like other revolutionary movements, has now defeated its own end by usurping the place of the tyrant it once sought to destroy. The pendulum has swung the other way now; for nowadays it is the artist who is "true to himself" who is "out in the cold" if his work isn't "modern."

It is true that every great work of art possesses the principles in it of modern primitive art. The principles of modern art have about the same relation to true art that scales have to true music. It is the mechanics of the art—the means to the end—but should not necessarily be the end in itself.

Relatively speaking, Cezanne and Van Gogh and the others are to art what Czerny and Bach are to music. There are a few highly intellectual individuals who may be perfectly sincere in sitting all afternoon listening in rapt ecstasy to the ponderous and very excellent works of these great musicians. But when the individuals of a whole nation go in for the "heavy stuff" in music and art by trying to produce cheap imitations of the real thing the term "degeneracy in modern art" is a very apt, and correct, and indisputable phrase.

Sofia Incident

The Sofia incident, in which George Earle, American Minister to Bulgaria, was the prime mover, illustrates America's need for a trained diplomatic career service. Such conduct on the part of a diplomat is inconceivable.

Our diplomats abroad are supposed to promote international good will, not wantonly to stir up trouble. We are, officially at least, not yet at war with Germany, and Earle's prompt recall would evidence Washington's sanity and desire for fair play. The favorable reaction in Berlin might help to avert war.

The President's smiling reference to this grave matter, at his press conference Tuesday, was, in the opinion of the writer, decidedly unbecoming in this critical time.

Why This War Is Important To Us

Walter Lippmann has recently called attention to the radical difference between the war now raging in Europe and Africa and the World War of twenty-odd years ago, but the difference seems not to be sufficiently appreciated.

That was primarily a land war, with vast bodies of soldiers contending, largely in trench warfare. The current war is primarily a naval and air war for control of the seas, which will draw with it the control of all the nations of the earth. The opposition of the isolationists to the "help England" program of the Administration apparently stems largely from their failure to appreciate this difference.

The success of Germany in the last war would not have greatly affected the United States. The Germans had then disclosed no plan to make over the world on the totalitarian model. They violated the rules of international law but apparently they did not seek to control all Europe. The freedom of other European nations was not seriously menaced, except in the case of Belgium, whose liberty would probably have been restored by a victorious Germany. The English navy was not in great peril and the American and British fleets would have continued to rule the seas after a defeat of Britain and France on land. Our foreign relations and commerce could therefore have continued much as usual notwithstanding the predominance of Germany in Europe.

Now, however, all is changed. Victory of the dictators in this war would mean their absolute control of the seas, with the resulting control of the world. Hitler's pronouncements and the condition of the subject countries under this rule show what sort of a world it would be, with America alone trying to bear the lamp of liberty.

The isolationists still talk of this contest as a land war, our entry into which would mean the sending of a great American army to Europe to fill more Flanders graves. Col. Lindbergh and others argue that Germany cannot be defeated because no armies could be landed in Europe which could withstand his millions.

But, in fact, if the United States entered the war it would not be necessary for us to send a soldier to Europe. The English, as Churchill says, do not need our soldiers. They do, however, need our warships and warplanes and they need them desperately and at once. And if we wish to make sure of victory, the salvation of the British fleet and the survival of our free institutions we should send our sailors and aviators with our ships and planes.

To beat Hitler it will not be necessary to invade Germany. If he tries an "all-out" invasion of England and fails, and when he comes to a realization that he cannot succeed in such an invasion, that the military equipment and personnel of the British and Americans are increasing in efficiency faster than his is increasing and that the potential power of America is becoming dynamic faster than his own power can be strengthened, he will know that he is beaten and will be glad to secure peace by restoring liberty to his subject peoples, who will aid in his destruction as soon as the British and Americans have made it possible for them to do so. He will not be able to control his own people after they see that their own cities can and will be bombed as ruthlessly as they have bombed the English cities.

Our participation in the war with all our force will make such a successful outcome certain and insure the permance of our liberty and institutions, now in deadly peril.

OSCAR D. WEED.

The Post Impressionist

Coal Oil Lamps

JUST TWO HOURS after sundown, when I stepped up on the porch, after a two weeks' wedding trip—a young bride, away back in 1906—I saw bright lights shining from six windows of the place which was to be my home.

When I entered the room that was my dining room for 30 years I saw the mantel, which had been completely festooned with newspapers, cut on the edges and in and out in a most intricate design. The mantel held two lamps, bright and shining, but the dining room table held another lamp with a colored shade. Out in the kitchen two smaller lamps were burning on the old table and one up in a bracket. That was my introduction to lamps.

The bedroom had a newspaper festooned mantel, and two very small lamps were burning in honor of the bride and of the wedding feast so carefully prepared for the stranger in a strange land by another city girl who had been a bride but six months previous to this.

The old colored woman in the kitchen had done her very best with scrubbing brush, scissors and newspaper to make the old place look cheerful and every shelf showed hours of work on her part, with the only materials at hand.

I soon discovered that every morning, after breakfast had been served both "in the house" and "in the kitchen" and before any regular housework was started, all of the lamps were carried to the kitchen, set on newspapers on the old, scarred table, and were given the treatment that would make them show beauty when night falls, softly and quietly, down on the farm.

To a city girl it seemed like a very simple operation to me—filling the lamps, but when the old colored woman left me to spend two winter months in her own home, I found it very difficult even to remember to do this job. In spite of all of my good resolutions, I'd forget until time for lighting them, and there was then a mad scramble to get the coal oil can, the little funnel and the various rags—along with the scissors.

Washing and drying the chimneys was not so bad, although my hands were very large, but in spite of care, the funnel, and the most strategic position in the way of daylight for this operation, I always spilled a drop or two of the oil some place on the outside of the lamp. With all of my wiping with the old rags, there was usually a drop left at large.

Getting the lamps filled was a simple thing to do in comparison with keeping the wicks straight. Many folks still think that scissors are all that is necessary, and that just a snip—and she gives a fine light. That is all wrong. Just a snip—and the ends burn higher than the middle, and while your back is turned, or you run to the kitchen for a look at the supper, the chimney will be all smoked in less than two minutes, in two places, and that lamp cannot be used again that night.

It is barely possible that when you returned to the kitchen, to take the hot rolls out of the oven, you smelled coal oil. Then you discovered that you had found one of the drops which had escaped the rag before you carried the lamp into the dining room, and that drop had now spread over a very large surface of the lamp as well as of your hand.

A trip to the kitchen range for a bit of hot water from the teakettle and soap and a towel are next in order, all before you can think of taking the bread from the oven.

Possibly you are detained for five minutes, when suddenly you hear a tremendous cra-c-k, the pieces of glass falling, and you will know then that the ill-trimmed wick is at the bottom of this calamity and that your chimney is gone for good. If the lamp was on the buffet, you can smell wax or shellac, and you then have a problem which city folks know nothing of.

During your hours spent in bed you will have dreams of blackened chimneys and tables, and you make a great resolve that you will get the wicks straight and you will get it done early. For many days I tried to wash the soot from the chimneys. Not being a chemist, I did not know why it always seemed to float on top of the water, and smear all over anything I happened to touch with my rag at that time. The rags would become impossible, and I put them in the fire. Then I started using paper for soot, and putting two and two together, had plenty for starting my wood fires, semidally.

For the living room we had now a "student's lamp." This had a round wick, a tall, narrow chimney and a white shade. It was more difficult to keep trimmed and burning than the straight burner lamps. As the children came along, and it seemed that we needed more lamps, grandmother gave me some of hers, as she then needed fewer. There was still the problem of the drop of oil and irregular wicks to contend with, and when the number of lamps was increased the work of keeping them trimmed and burning was augmented.

Then a new kind of lamp was invented, one with a mantle. This was guaranteed to give more light, to burn less oil and be better in every way. The manufacturers of them were so anxious to save the eyes of the farm folks that they offered a good trade-in on the old student lamp.

While we did get better light with them, we had harder work in caring for them. The mantle was so frail that sometimes a hard puff of wind would break it.

When these new lamps smoked, everything in the room had a coating, and then the chimney would crack. Yet when everything was all right, the light would show a mile away, and the children soon felt that the fireplace, with a book, a lamp and a bushel of apples was about all that a fellow needed when night came and his work was done.

"Home, Sweet Home" was written around lamplight, and although at least 122 hours per year must be spent in keeping them in order and ready for service, farm women just go along and do it with not a thought of expenditure of time. Multiplied by 34 years, which I have spent in doing it, I find I have 4,134 hours. Had I worked on an eight-hour day and 40 hours a week, more than two whole years of my life would have been spent on lamps.

Of Propagandists

By Dorothy Thompson

Isolationists Vs. The Commentators

IT SEEMS to me that it would be well to get clear in our minds the meaning of the word "propaganda." For we have come to brand every one who disagrees with us as a "propagandist."

THOMPSON

OF COURSE, all advocacy of any viewpoint is propaganda, in the exact meaning of the word. But in ordinary use the phrase advocacy is not disinterested, does not arise from intelligent conviction, but is motivated by malice or self-interest. Senator Clark, a few days ago, said, "If an investigation of propaganda tending to bring the United States into another European war should be undertaken Miss Dorothy Thompson would be counted among the propagandists."

Now, it would be just exactly as fair for Miss Thompson to reply to Senator Clark: "If an investigation should be undertaken of propaganda tending to encourage the Fascist movement here and abroad, Senator Clark would be counted among the propagandists."

Using the same technique as Senator Clark, of branding those who do not agree with his view of the Nazi government, which is certainly no friend of this country or its institutions, is using his speeches and arguments of the opponents of the lend-lease bill as the chief ammunition in their attempts from Berlin to influence American policy. One only needs to listen to the German short-wave broadcasting to realize this.

But I do not think that Senator Clark is a propagandist for Nazi Germany. I think, as the Nazis do, that the policy he advocates is greatly advantageous to Nazi Germany and greatly disadvantageous to this country. I think that the lend-lease bill is greatly advantageous to Great Britain and greatly advantageous to this country. That does not make either of us a "propagandist" in the sense in which that word is popularly used. It makes us opponents.

THERE IS ALSO a tendency to quote and comment on statements made by others without investigating exactly what the statement was. Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling, who spent several years of her life inciting to the persecution of all pacifists as traitors, and who now has joined them, tried to hang me and Mrs. Roosevelt in effigy the other day, me for having "advocated" sending several million men abroad in this war; and Senator Clark says: "Recently Miss Thompson expressed her willingness to sacrifice a million American boys."

Now, Miss Thompson never expressed anything of the kind.

What Miss Thompson said in the Town Hall meeting in Washington some days ago was in answer to a repeated question from Congressman Mundt. She said, "If I were convinced that it was necessary for the freedom and independence of the United States to send an army or a navy here or there, and to sacrifice even a million lives, I would be willing to do so—to sacrifice my own and my son's."

The answer was made in an attempt to make an intellectual and moral position perfectly clear. I hate war as much as Senator Clark does, and have tried for 20 years to get this country to abandon its isolationist attitude and use its immense power and responsibility for helping to maintain peace in this world.

But I am not among those who believe that war can be averted by pacifism, or that war is the worst possible thing that can befall a people, or that to die in battle is the worst possible thing that can befall a human being. Personally, I would a great deal rather die than see this country become a sub-Nazi Reich, or live on the terms of the totalitarian world, and I assume that there are millions of other Americans who feel exactly as I do. Evidently there are, because a poll of them recently showed a majority willing to go on helping Britain and helping Britain more energetically, even at the risk of war.

And in the statement that Senator Clark quoted, I added that I was convinced that it would be neither wise nor necessary to send the Army off this soil in the present struggle.

AN UNLIMITED reign of terror is worse, in my mind, than war. I see neither reason nor evidence to indicate that a struggle against fascism leads to fascism, although I see a great deal of evidence to prove that collaboration with fascism does lead to fascism. And I do think that this nation is in the most serious emergency and under the most serious menace from abroad that it has ever been in its history.

FURTHERMORE, if a nation puts itself in the position where it is incapable of waging anything except a defensive war on its own soil, while its enemies are capable of waging both an offensive and a defensive war, that nation is sunk. If Senators Clark and Wheeler have their way, that is what is going to happen to this Nation.

THE EXPRESSION of these views is advocacy of a policy. Specifically it is advocacy of the lend-lease bill. It is, therefore, "propaganda," exactly as Senator Clark's counter-advocacy is. But the people of America must decide according to which "propaganda" makes the greater sense and more closely conforms to wise action in the face of reality.

Senator Wheeler the other day attacked radio commentators for being "biased" in their handling of foreign news. He implied that they were prejudiced. Prejudiced means prejudgment; a judgment not based on accurate information.

His only basis for that statement, made en bloc against all radio commentators, is the curious fact that, almost without exception all of them—Mr. Kaltenborn, Mr. Swing, Mr. Shirer—believe that the Nazi government has designs against the United States and that if Britain falls this country will be in for the most serious crisis in its entire history.

BUT SENATOR WHEELER does not ask whether these gentlemen are competent to speak and whether they know what they are talking about.

I suggest that they know much better than Senator Wheeler does, since all of them have spent 20 years of their lives studying the Nazi movement, and before that the relation between the United States and the rest of the world.

None of them is in politics; none has any political ambitions; all have made themselves bitterly unpopular with certain groups.

The fact that every close and disinterested student of Nazi Germany—all of them with years and years of experience as foreign correspondents: Mr. Mowrer, Mr. Stowe, Mr. Stoneman and Mr. Gunther, of the Chicago Daily News; Mr. Tolschus, of the Times; Mr. Knickerbocker, of Hearst's; Mr. Shirer, of the Christian Science Monitor, and Columbia Broadcasting, and Mr. Sheean, of the North American Newspaper Alliance—the fact that all reach the same conclusion, namely, that Nazi Germany has designs on the Americas and that the British resistance is our first line of defense, ought to impress Senator Wheeler.

You would think he would be interested to know what these men, who, incidentally, have all risked their lives time and again to get at the facts, really think about our international position.

But he doesn't. These men do not agree with Senator Wheeler, and therefore they are "biased."

Senators Wheeler and Clark, they are biased. They are biased, as you are, on behalf of American liberty and American democracy. In addition, they are vastly better informed than you are. If they aren't, they are dopes. They have spent their adult lives informing themselves in order to find out for the American people what is really going on. And that there is such extraordinary unanimity amongst them is worth the attention of the American people.

Farming Out Defense

By Ernest Lindley

Pressure Increases

PRESSURE on defense producers to subcontract parts of their orders is increasing. Officials who have studied the problem think that the time for completing many, perhaps most, of the items already ordered can be reduced by as much as 50 per cent by using facilities which are now idle.

Some $10,000,000,000 in defense orders have gone to about 13,000 primary contractors. But between 80 and 90 per cent of the total has gone to about 1,000 concerns. Orders were piled on the larger concerns for at least two reasons. They usually have the facilities and established managerial ability to handle large orders. It is easier to deal with a limited number of large concerns than with thousands of smaller ones.

It would have taken months longer, probably, to break contracts down into parts and negotiate with numerous smaller concerns. The inspection staff required by the War Department would have been immense.

War Department policy has been to hold the primary contractors responsible for delivering the goods. If the primary contractors want to get others to make parts for them, all right. But the War Department's interest in subcontracting has been lukewarm, at least until recently.

Every survey has revealed, however, that facilities which are cast in the aggregate have not yet been put to work for defense. The obstacles to their use are numerous, but not insurmountable.

On the side of the concerns which already have their contracts with the Government, there is a natural reluctance to share their profits. Besides, "farming out" is often more expensive than producing in the home plant. But there are other factors on this side.

There is no saving in time of delivery of the finished product unless the "bottle-neck" parts are farmed out. These are sometimes hardest to make, not only for the primary contractor but for subcontractors. In machine-tool making, in particular, the top contractor may easily misjudge which are the parts which are going to be "bottle-necks." If he makes the wrong analysis, the "farmed out" parts may pile up, while some of his own facilities remain idle, pending the completion of the "bottle-neck" pieces.

MANY CONCERNS do not know where to find concerns to which to subcontract parts. That is, outside those with whom they deal regularly. If they subcontract to a machine shop which proves to be unable to deliver the parts on schedule and of the prescribed quality, time may be lost instead of saved.

On the other side, many small concerns do not know how to get subcontracts, or even what kinds of parts may be within their capacity to make.

Granting the obstacles, Government officials and borrowed experts concerned with "farming out" are sure that it can be used successfully on a far greater scale than it now is. One of the leading practical enthusiasts for farming out is Francis Trecker, of a Milwaukee machine tool-making firm, who was brought here to advise the War Department and is now attached to OPM.

The Trecker firm—Kearney & Trecker—had only 32 production employes in 1932. (This was an abnormally low depression figure). Now it has about 5,000. Over about two years, beginning in 1938, it increased its output by 400 per cent. It took large orders from the French and other foreign governments, and had to deliver in a hurry.

PART OF THE expanded output came from increasing the size of the home plant. Part came from putting it on a line-production basis, which was considered radical for the machine-tool industry. Part came from subcontracting.

Kearney & Trecker have about 90 concerns producing for them on a subcontract basis. They farm out about one-third of all their orders.

On the average, the items which they subcontract cost $1.53 for every $1.00 they would cost if produced in the home plant. But, as an offset, the home concern saves a large capital expansion. And, also, the finished articles come out more quickly.

Trecker said last week at a meeting of the Washington Chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Management that up to about 35 per cent of his type of production could be farmed out without financial loss to the primary contractor. But above that there would need to be adjustments in prices for the primary contractor.

Making allowance for all difficulties, Trecker and other practical experts are convinced that farming out is feasible on a great scale. They point out that it is done successfully by makers of extremely intricate and refined articles, such as Pratt & Whitney in the airplane engine field and Sperry in the airplane and naval instrument field.

Farming out also has general social advantages. It keeps skilled workers occupied in their own communities, instead of draining them off into the large centers. It spreads economic benefits during the defense period and reduces population movement both now and after the war.

Thus the farming out plan is winning converts not only among officials concerned with expediting defense production, but among those who are thinking also of the readjustments that will have to be made when the present emergency has ended.

Portrait Of A Filibuster

IT IS NOW clear that the leaders of the opposition have organized a filibuster against the lease-lend bill. Poor management of the Administration forces in the Senate, due largely to the prolonged illness of Senator Walter F. George, has given the opposition a tempting chance. They are now delaying the final vote for a week or ten days, in the hope that by hammering on the nerves of the Senatorial wabblers and the public, they will finally obtain a response.

ALSOP

The members of one of the supreme deliberate bodies of a great nation talking for talk's sake, while the flames of world conflagration lick everywhere at the society they live in, present a spectacle in the last degree curious. To the imaginative visitor to the Senate galleries, the world outside, where brave peoples fight for freedom, and the chance of a day's battle may mean victory for tyranny or liberty, seems always to press in on the debate. But this seeming can only be produced by the exercise of the imagination, for rumors of the world outside rarely penetrate to the Senate chamber.

ON LAST FRIDAY the scene in the Senate chamber was particularly striking. The opposition's chosen chieftain, Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, had the floor to discuss the bill's legal aspects, and particularly its delegations of power. Wheeler is a brilliant legislative combatant, an eminently successful man, a bitter, unforgiving enemy of the President's, and the opposition spokesman who commands the widest audience. Logically, the mere fact that Wheeler was on his feet should have created a certain dramatic tension. Yet what made the scene striking was just the absence of any tension at all.

The setting was as usual. The large, putty-colored Senate chamber, painted with meaningless mid-Victorian decorations, wore its usual appearance of comfortable shabbiness, of the kind of ease that goes with heavy old chairs, green carpets and a few brass spittoons. The galleries, as usual, were crowded with sightseers, and below, at their desks on the floor, were the Senators, looking as usual like a haphazard collection of rather ordinary, rather elderly American men, and paying their usual very intermittent attention to the proceedings.

Wheeler himself, a tall, gangling man with a big, powerful head, thin, straggling hair and steel spectacles that somehow give him a menacing expression, paced up and down, reading his speech with gestures, by his desk at the front of the chamber. The speech was more copious than stirring, and while Wheeler intoned his prepared paragraphs comparatively few Senators—the majority and minority leaders, bumbling Barkley and shrewd McNary, the bill's official manager, George, and a faithful little band of isolationists—remained continuously on the floor. Then, when Wheeler was interrupted for a question, and real debate started, Senators hurried in to see the fun.

The fun, one might have anticipated, would be serious discussion of the terrible choices that now confront this country. It was seldom anything of the sort. Feeling has hardened in the Senate in these last weeks, and a good deal of the time the fun took the form of sharp personal exchanges. One Lucas, of Illinois, rose to argue with Wheeler, for example, and was immediately taunted with the character of the Chicago convention. "The Senator knows," Wheeler shouted, "who put the fellow down below in the dumps, the garbage, the sewer inspector." And Lucas, nettled, shot back, "The Senator from Montana seems to know more about garbage than I do."

The best fun of all was the altercation between Wheeler and George, when the charge of filibustering was openly made. Wheeler found some particularly portentous implications in George's bill. George, neat, bankerish and usually polite in an elaborate, old-Southern way, rose to deny Wheeler's assertions. Wheeler snapped at him, "I have the floor." George replied, "You've had the floor for the best part of two weeks." Wheeler remarked challengingly that he could have it for two weeks more if he wanted, and George snapped back, "Then it's a filibuster." Seeing the two men, both able, both with long records of public service, standing on the Senate floor playing "You're another," gave the galleries great pleasure.

But mostly these episodes were rambling and diffuse. Connally, the japish Texas Senator who makes a specialty of opposition-baiting, would ask Wheeler to explain his meaning. And Wheeler, who speaks rambling except from a prepared manuscript, would answer with a long flow of words of which the following is a verbatim sample:

KINTNER

"What I mean to say that this bill does, under the title, as I pointed out already, and the name of defense outside the bill . . . what it does is this, it gives, as I shall point out a little later . . . I do not care to take up the time now . . . it gives the President more power than any President of the United States has ever had in peacetime or wartime, and more power in my judgment than any President of the United States ought to have in representative government. That is what I said . . . the language speaks for itself."

Of course, verbatim quotations from any orator sound a little like the writings of the stream-of-consciousness school. Yet to those who remembered the world outside, seemed insolubly puzzling until the strange moment when Chandler, of Kentucky, quoted Hitler's "Mein Kampf" to the speaker. Then Wheeler replied, with an illuminating note of something very like pride, "The Senator is more familiar with Hitler's books and Hitler's sayings probably than I am."

Pulling Together

SWEEPING as the social and economic changes that the war is bringing to Britain will be, they will be gradual and evolutionary if Britain wins rather than violently revolutionary.

Englishmen joke about the fact that they and their country will be bankrupt when the war is over, but they invariably add that they prefer to be free men and "broke" than to be semislaves even if there were assurances, which there are not, that their economic status would be better.

Most Englishmen privately concede that their national debt will be so staggering that probably some form of partial repudiation will have to be effected to prevent the burden of taxation from strangling the functioning of the economic system.

But the impression, widely held in America, that British public opinion is moving so rapidly to the left that Ernest Bevin, the minister of labor, who as head of the transport workers union led the general strike of 1926, might in the relatively near future succeed Winston Churchill as prime minister, is unfounded.

While Bevin may some day become prime minister, it is crystal clear that under present conditions no one could successfully challenge Churchill's leadership.

CHURCHILL today towers above every other individual in British public life and is the idol of the whole United Kingdom.

Through his extraordinary command of both the spoken and written word, his personal charm and his force of character, Churchill has energized all Britain with his own unconquerable spirit. To the people he has come to symbolize John Bull himself.

Churchill's success in making the most conservative of the Tories and the most leftish of the Laborites pull together in harness in the cabinet with such complete harmony has been achieved by two broad policies he has followed.

First, he has impressed upon the cabinet that it is treasonable to waste precious hours wrangling over differing social or economic issues when every ounce of energy should be concentrated exclusively on the job of increasing Britain's war strength.

Secondly, he has given the individual cabinet ministers a free hand in running their respective departments, with the sole qualification that he will not tolerate anyone's using the urgency of the times as an excuse for putting into practice new economic doctrines that the majority of the cabinet do not unhesitatingly accept as necessary.

In selecting Ernest Bevin as minister of labor, Churchill picked a man in whom the British working class has complete trust. Bevin's principal duty is to help get maximum industrial output.

Although he has full authority to draft man power, he has not used it. He has made labor understand that greater production is vital to the nation's preservation.

The fact that Bevin favors the eventual nationalization of transportation and the basic natural resources industries is completely irrelevant, in Churchill's mind, and has no bearing on his qualifications for a cabinet post. The only issue at the moment is winning the war.

Questions like government ownership can be debated after the war is over.

Because Bevin has Churchill's confidence on the one hand and the trust of the laboring men on the other, he has been able to do a remarkable job in stepping up industrial output.

Following the French collapse and under the threat of a possible Hitler invasion of the United Kingdom, British labor willingly stretched out its work week.

In bottleneck war industries labor has worked as many as 72 hours a week. Work weeks of 54 to 60 hours prevail in many plants at the present time. As a result Britain's war output has been enormously expanded.

Bevin's own belief is that a 48-hour week is the normal optimum, but he says that for periods of a few months duration it is possible materially to lengthen the work week and secure much enlarged production.

Accurate figures on comparative living costs are difficult to obtain, and comparisons are inexact because many things for which people would make peacetime expenditures are no longer available. But probably the cost of living in Britain as compared with prewar days has gone up around 10 per cent.

TOTAL WAGES paid have increased by far more than this figure, both because of the overtime pay resulting from the lengthened work week and because of increased hourly rates.

Consequently in real purchasing power the average British worker is better off than he was.

In many war industries the workers' weekly pay is at least double the prewar average.

The fact that the British excess profits tax absorbs 100 per cent of all abnormal war earnings has been a factor of importance in connection with the rising hourly rates of pay.

Since no part of the war profits can be retained and since higher costs are in effect paid by the government employers have much more readily acquiesced in demands for increased wages than would otherwise be the case.

Just as Churchill has delegated authority to Bevin in the labor field, so he has given full responsibility and power to his other cabinet ministers in their respective jobs.

Captive Bulgaria

By Barnet Nover

Hitler's Latest Victim

YESTERDAY was Bulgaria's traditional "day of liberation and independence." But the tragic circumstances in which that Balkan kingdom finds itself made a mockery of this year's celebration. For by Sunday the German military occupation of Bulgaria was already an accomplished and irrevocable fact. Thus even before the Bulgarian Parliament sought to make a virtue of necessity by ratifying the Vienna pact linking the kingdom with the Axis, Bulgarian sovereignty and independence had ceased to have any meaning. Hitler has conquered Bulgaria.

NOVER

In his statement explaining his government's action, Premier Philoff expressed enthusiasm over the large place assigned to little Bulgaria in Hitler's new order. But he was more honest and more realistic when he spoke of the "pressure of events" which had led Bulgaria to her present course.

IN MAKING Bulgaria a satrapy of the Third Reich, King Boris and Premier Philoff will win no encomiums from their people. The Bulgars remember with bitterness that between 1913 and 1919 their country was twice on the losing side in a war. They have no happy recollections of the partnership between their country and the Kaiser's Reich in the First World War. The overwhelming majority of them have no love for the Nazis. Above all, they want to preserve their independence and avoid war. The alliance with Germany definitely means the loss of their freedom. There is no certainty that it may not also mean the transformation of Bulgaria into a battlefield.

The choice before the Sofia government was undoubtedly a difficult one. When German troops occupied Rumania the full might of the German army was poised on the Danube, ready to be hurled against the little kingdom. Bulgaria has neither the manpower nor the army with which to put up a fight against so formidable an opponent. She could only resist the Reich with the aid of others.

Where could such aid have come from, Russia? There is no indication that the Soviet government was at any stage ready to come to Bulgaria's assistance in the event that country was attacked by Germany. Turkey? Yugoslavia? A combination between those countries and Bulgaria would have had its great advantages to each and all of them. But the attempt to create an alliance of the Balkan States never got anywhere, in part, because of Bulgarian reluctance. So when the test came the choice for Bulgaria had really narrowed down to one between capitulation and pro forma resistance. King Boris and Premier Philoff agreed to capitulation. No doubt they hoped thereby to spare their country the ravages of war which had laid waste so many other nations. Yet there is no certainty that their gamble will prove right, that the reward of capitulation will be peace.

BULGARIA'S voluntary submission plays directly into Hitler's hands. Had Bulgaria resisted it would no doubt have been easy enough for the German Wehrmacht to overwhelm that nation. But a German-Bulgar clash might have ignited the Balkan powder barrel and thus brought about what the Fuehrer has been desperately trying to avert—a war on two fronts. That possibility still remains. If Turkey agrees to come to the assistance of Greece, in the event of a German attack on that country, the fat would be in the fire. The very fact that Hitler moved into Bulgaria at a moment when large-scale military operations in the Balkans are difficult because of climatic conditions suggests that ultimate Turkish belligerence was a possibility he had to reckon with, particularly after Anthony Eden's visit to Ankara. With Bulgaria rapidly occupied he may find it easier to intimidate the Turks into remaining behind their frontier and, having done so, to intimidate the Greeks into making peace.

It cannot be assumed for a moment that he will not succeed in completely immobilizing the Balkans. The odds are definitely in his favor. Despite the spectacular victories won by Gen. Wavell in Africa the British are probably not yet in a position to send a large force to the Aegean area. Yet even if Hitler has his way in the Balkans his victory is likely to prove a limited one. From their present bases at Crete and Lemnos and possible bases which, as an alternative to active participation in the war, the Turks may place at their disposal, Great Britain will be in a position to harass the Germans, disrupt their communications and bedevil the economic life of an area upon whose resources Germany must draw on for her war effort. And as long as the British are able to carry on guerrilla war on Hitler's Balkan forces even from the air alone, the occupation of Rumania and Bulgaria will remain a potential liability for the Third Reich. In any event the war will not be won in southeast Europe but in the air over England and in the waters surrounding the British Isles.

Supreme Court May Rule Today On Snake Case

By the Associated Press

The Supreme Court may rule today on the wife-murder conviction of Robert S. James, Los Angeles barber, who challenged the propriety of exhibiting live rattlesnakes to the jury which tried him.

Counsel for James, sentenced to die, contended the snakes were displayed in the Los Angeles Superior Court in an attempt to "influence the jurors and excite their passion."

Other cases which may be decided tomorrow when the court reassembles after a two-week recess involve:

1. The contempt-of-court convictions of the Los Angeles Times and of Harry Bridges, West Coast labor leader, resulting from public comment on court cases before a final settlement.

2. Validity of agreements by manufacturers of women's hats and dresses to eliminate style "piracy" by registering the creations and penalizing anyone copying the designs.

Thawed-Out Capitalites Rush Round of Parties

By Elizabeth Henney

The dying winter momentarily relaxed its grip on Washington yesterday and spring burst forth in a riot of sunshine. As a result Capitalites, roused from apathy brought on by the recent marrow-freezing cold, rushed into a round of parties which began at lunchtime and continued far, far into the night.

To start off the day Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips entertained 28 guests at luncheon at their home on Foxhall Road, later taking some of them on for a view of the "Functions of Color" exhibit at the Phillips' Galleries on Twenty-first Street.

Among the guests were M. and Mme. Henri Focillon, Mr. and Mrs. John Walker, the Undersecretary of War and Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann, John Thatcher, Mrs. Charles E. Acker, Mr. and Mrs. Forbes Watson, Mr. and Mrs. C. Law Watkins, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Seymour, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Partridge, Miss Alice Downing, Robert Parsons, Mrs. George F. Porter and Mr. Houck, Miss Mary Winslow and Theodore Rousseau.

Mrs. John Allen Dougherty entertained at dinner last evening at her home in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Whiteside, who are neighbors of hers at her home in Westport, Conn.

The Chinese Ambassador, Dr. Hu Shih, was the ranking guest. Other guests included Dr. and Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kenna, Mr. and Mrs. George Maurice Norris, Mrs. Harold Walker and Father Joseph Code.

Lippmanns Entertain For Mrs. George Porter

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Lippmann were on the schedule of dinner givers also. They entertained in their home in Georgetown in honor of Mrs. George F. Porter, of New York, who is a house guest.

Guests included the Polish Ambassador, Jan Ciechanowski; the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Senator and Mrs. Warren F. Austin, Undersecretary of War and Mrs. Robert P. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Streit, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Hill, Mr. and Mrs. David P. Morgan, Countess de Gramont, Robert Pell, of the State Department; Wayne Chatfield-Taylor, Gen. C. L. Lindemann and Anthony Belasy, formerly of the Hungarian Legation.

Mrs. McLean Is Host At Friendship

The top of the evening, however, both in size and grandeur, was Mrs. Evelyn Walsh McLean's annual dinner for the members of the Women's National Press Club, the Newspaper Women's Club, and a number of her close friends.

Over 140 guests gathered in the drawing room at Friendship, the McLean estate, at 8 o'clock. Mrs. McLean, who stood at the door against a background of banked pink snapdragons, was gowned in sugar-pink lace, fashioned on flowing lines. Over her arm she carried a pink maribou cape, and the famous Hope diamond blazed from a necklace of smaller diamonds.

Receiving with Mrs. McLean were Mrs. Cordell Hull, who was gowned chicly in black, and Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, whose black frock was accented at the neckline with sequins. Others noted during the evening included Helen Essary, president of the Women's National Press Club (she wore beige, fashioned with flowing skirt and accented with black lace); Katherine Brooks, president of the Newspaper Women's Club (she wearing a gown of Chinese red crepe); Director of the Mint Nellie Tayloe Ross, wearing blue velvet; Mrs. Lucille Potter McMillin; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin, Mrs. Daniel C. Roper, Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Mrs. Eleanor Patterson, Mrs. Emil Hurja and many others.

Following the dinner, during which guests sat at numerous tables set throughout the dining room and ballroom, the entire company gathered in the ballroom to see the full-length motion picture, "The Girl in the News."

Parties Accent Fashion Show

Several luncheon parties accented the Saturday calendar at the Shoreham Hotel where a Fashion Show was on the program for the day. Mrs. Jack Beall, of Dallas, Tex., who is spending the winter at the Shoreham, had as her guest a number of Texans and former Texans, including several wives from the Texas Congressional contingent.

Mrs. Morris Sheppard was the ranking guest in the company of 12. Others there were Mrs. Luther Johnson, Mrs. Fritz Lanham, Mrs. Martin Dies, Mrs. Lyndon Johnson, Mrs. Ewing Thompson, Mrs. Thomas P. Gore, Mrs. Roy Miller, Mrs. Lewis Sidney Morey and Mrs. Clarence Lee Miller.

Plans Busy Schedule of Travel

Harris & Ewing

Miss Sheppard To Be Wed On March 29

Miss Lucile Sheppard, daughter of Senator and Mrs. Morris Sheppard, has set Saturday, March 29, as the date of her marriage to Arthur H. Keyes, jr.

The wedding will take place at the Sheppard home at 1814 Nineteenth Street. Relatives and a few close friends will witness the ceremony. There will be a small reception afterwards at the Sheppard residence.

Miss Sheppard will have as her only attendant her sister, Mrs. Connie Mack, jr., of California. Mr. Keyes' brother will serve as best man.

The bride-elect is now working for her M. A. Degree at Radcliffe College. She was graduated with honors from Wellesley College last year. She also was graduated from Gunston Hall here and before that she studied at Western High School. She made her debut at a dinner at the Mayflower Hotel several seasons ago.

Mr. Keyes, who is the son of Arthur Keyes, of Rutland, Vt., and the late Mrs. Keyes, was graduated from Deerfield Academy in 1935 and from Princeton University in 1939. He is now attending the graduate school of Architecture at Harvard University.

Recital to Aid Allied Relief

Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman has given the use of her home, Tuxeden, at Edgemoor Lane in Bethesda, for a musicale to be held tonight at 9 o'clock for the benefit of British and Greek relief. Mrs. La Vergne Fairchild and her students will give a musical program, in costume, entitled "The Four Seasons."

Among those asked to assist Mrs. Tuckerman for the evening are Mrs. Donald Bingham, Mrs. Frank Morrow, Countess de Castellane, Mrs. Arthur MacArthur and the vice chairman of the 21 committees for relief in Great Britain of which Mrs. Tuckerman is chairman. Also assisting will be Mrs. Tuckerman's two married daughters, Mrs. Robert Hugh Williams and Mrs. Benjamin H. Biays. A number of British and Greek guests of honor will attend, among them Mme. Diamantopoulos, wife of the Greek Minister, and Mme. Depasta, wife of the Minister Counselor of the Legation.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

AT THE DINNER given the other night by Ambassador and Mrs. Anthony J. Drexel Biddle in honor of the newly-arrived Polish Ambassador and Mme. Ciechanowski, the red and white of the Polish national colors were used for table decorations. In the center of each table—there were four of them in the dining-room of the 1925 F Street Club—was a mass of red and white carnations and several of the ladies carried out the color-scheme in their dresses. Lovely Princess Hohenlohe, daughter of the hostess, chose red for her beautifully fitted evening gown, and chic Countess Lasocka had placed a red rose on the skirt of her black lace frock, just at the knee.

Mme. Ciechanowska was gracious and charming in a simple black gown worn with a scarf of silver fox. She was saying that she would return to Washington the middle of this week after putting one of her boys in school in Rhode Island. Among the distinguished company gathered to greet the Ciechanowskis were the Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank C. Walker, the Solicitor General and Mrs. Francis Biddle, Senator Joseph F. Guffey and the Misses Guffey and Senator and Mrs. Claude Pepper. Also Mr. and Mrs. Loy Henderson, Count George Lasocki, Prince Aleksander Hohenlohe and Mr. and Mrs. Philip Leslie Graham.

Pretty Mrs. Shaw Parker came to Washington earlier in the winter with a view to moving into the house which she has been doing over in Georgetown. But, finding the workmen still in full possession, she went away again. Two days ago she reappeared and just moved in with them, as the best means of seeing to the finishing touches.

NEXT TO MRS. PARKER'S house is the home of the Philip Bonsals, which they bought and did over last summer, and opposite the Bonsals is a little red brick house, sitting high off the street, which has been recently purchased by Mrs. Noyes Lewis. Now that Mrs. Lewis has returned from her winter vacation in Florida, work will begin in earnest and the plans look most attractive.

Mrs. Arthur Woods had returned to her house in Georgetown from a two-month trip out West. Mrs. Woods paid her annual visit to the boys' school which she runs in Arizona and stopped in California on her way home.

Most of the news received by letter from friends abroad is laconic in the extreme these days. A postcard by air mail from St. Sebastian says that Ramon Padilla is well and would like to hear more often from his friends in Washington. He regrets that he has almost lost touch with America and the happy days before the war.

A LETTER from the Erasto Villas is postmarked "Shanghai," where they are on vacation from his present post at the Argentine Embassy in Tokio. It is his second assignment since being transferred from Washington, the other being in Colombia.

I hear that Jean Grosjean, after a vacation in Florida visiting Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Davies, will go to Canada to enlist in the Belgian contingent of the Canadian Air Force. Mrs. Grosjean, who will accompany her husband to Florida, is one of the three lovely daughters of Mr. Davies.

In spite of what one reads from time to time about the State Department being synonymous with stiffness, some of the best jokes in Washington circulate through its august corridors. Latest departmental attack of humor was brought on by accounts of the bottle-throwing contest between the United States Minister to Bulgaria George H. Earle and a Nazi officer in a Sofia restaurant. Mr. Earle had asked the orchestra to play "Tipperary" and the German objected with projectiles in the form of bottles. The State Department now privately terms "Tipperary" the "Bottle Hymn of the Republic."

Mr. and Mrs. Roy G. Pierce, of Takoma Park, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Patricia May Pierce, to William G. Coe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Grant Coe, of Orlando, Fla.

Miss Pierce, who will be graduated in June from the University of Maryland, attended Roosevelt High School and the Marjorie Webster School here. Mr. Coe attended the University of Georgia, Rollins College and will be graduated from the Bliss Electrical School here in June. No date has been set for the wedding.

G.W.U. Women To See Exhibition

Columbian women of George Washington University will meet March 6 in the gymnasium of the university, at 4 p. m. Following tea there will be a demonstration of the activities of the physical education department of the university by Miss Ruth Atwell, physical director. Miss Atwell's students will demonstrate the work shop for building the figure.

The spring luncheon will be held at the Carlton Hotel on May 3. Extensive preparations are being made, under the direction of Miss Alice Drake, chairman of the program committee.

In 1940, a drive for scholarship funds was conducted with the result that seventeen scholarships were awarded.

Wessels Fete Col. Shipp

One of a series of parties being given in honor of Colonel William E. Shipp these days, was the cocktail party given yesterday afternoon by Capt. Karl Wessel, Naval Attache of the Swedish Legation, and Mme. Wessel.

Col. Shipp, who recently has been appointed Military Attache to Yugoslavia, will leave Washington on March 12 for New York and will sail from there March 15.

Yesterday's party was given at the Wessels' apartment on Connecticut Avenue. The hostess, who received informally, was gowned in a becoming model of pencil blue crepe, trimmed with wide bands of matching velvet. A shoulder corsage of gardenias and a pearl necklace were further accents for her ensemble.

Guests included a number of high-ranking Army and Navy officials, a sizable representation from the Diplomatic Corps and several of the residential contingent.

Among those noted during the afternoon were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Ralston Holmes, Baron and Baroness Stackelberg, the Second Secretary of the Netherlands Legation, Dr. H. N. Boon, and Mme. Boon; the Assistant Military Attache of the Swedish Legation, Lieut. Curt Wennberg, and Mme. Wennberg, George Abell, Miss Natalie Askenazy, Mrs. Clifton Phillips, George Williams, Col. R. M. Riley, and many more.

Bonavitas Return

Brig. Gen. Auguste Bonavita, Military Attache to the French Embassy, and Mme. Bonavita, who were at the Waldorf-Astoria while in New York to meet their children, Marie-Therese, Bertrand and Alain, upon their arrival aboard the Siboney, returned on Friday to their apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel, Washington.

Genevieve Travers Engaged to Wed Dr. S. B. Moore, Jr.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Elliot Travers of 23 East Eighty-third Street, N. Y., and East View Farm, East View, N. Y., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Genevieve Butler Travers, to Dr. Samuel Barlow Moore, jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Barlow Moore of 41 West Eighty-fifth Street, New York City.

Miss Travers attended Westover School and was graduated from Marymount School. She was introduced to society at a reception given by her parents at their home in November, 1936. She is a granddaughter of the late James Butler, founder of the Butler stores and the Empire City Race Track.

Dr. Moore attended Loyola School and was graduated from Georgetown University and New York Medical College and is now an interne at the Fifth Avenue Hospital. The wedding will be held in May.

Mrs. Robert To Visit N. Y.

Mrs. Lawrence Wood Robert, jr., will leave today for New York for several days' visit. She will return to Washington on Thursday.

On Saturday Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker will give a birthday dinner in honor of Mrs. Robert. The party will be given at the home at 2812 N Street which Mrs. Wanamaker has taken for the season.

The next few weeks will be something of a whirligig for Mrs. Robert for she will be leaving shortly for Corpus Christi, Tex., where she will attend the opening on March 12 of the new air base there designed by her husband. From there she will go on to New Orleans for the following weekend, then over to Sarasota, Fla., for a few days and then down to Palm Beach.

A brief visit to Nassau is next on the schedule but it will of necessity be a brief one, for Mrs. Robert has planned to be back in Washington on March 28 in order to attend the Jackson Day dinner which takes place here the following evening.

Press Women To See Preview Of Mellon Art

Members and guests at the Women's National Press Club luncheon tomorrow will be treated to a preview of what the public will see when the famous Mellon Art Gallery is officially opened on March 17. Colored slides will be shown following the 1 o'clock luncheon, and will depict some of the famous paintings and art treasures now housed in the museum.

Director David E. Finley, of the Mellon Gallery, and Mrs. Finley will be among the guests of honor, who will include the Chief Curator of the Museum John Walker, the assistant curator, McGill James, and Thomas Mabury, jr., from the New York Modern Art Museum. Special guests will include Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips, of the Phillips Art Gallery; Everett Watkins and Mrs. William Corcoran Eustis.

Mrs. Ellen Woodward Is Hospital Patient

Mrs. Ellen S. Woodward, member of the Social Security Board, is at the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, recuperating from an attack of bronchitis.

Mills Alumnae Fete College Head

Mrs. Stephen Brunauer and the members of the Mills College Club entertained yesterday afternoon at Mrs. Brunauer's home in honor of Aurelia Henry Reinhardt, Mills College president, who is in Washington on a short visit.

Assisting the hostess were Mrs. Donald Kline, president of the Washington Mills College Club, and Miss Lucy Cowdin, and Miss Frances Cahn.

Invitations Recalled

The invitations which were issued by Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Walker, of Lenox Street, Chevy Chase, Md., for a party on March 14, have been recalled, due to the death of Representative William D. Byron, in whose honor the event was to have been given.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel left on Saturday for Chicago and will return the latter part of next week. They will be accompanied by Mrs. Humphrey Daniel and will stop at the Hotel Drake.

Mrs. Thomas Goff, of Washington, was hostess at luncheon on Friday in Hamilton, Bermuda, in honor of Mrs. William Hopkins Beck, wife of the United States Consul to Bermuda. Other guests included Mrs. Jerome Hilborn, of New York, and Mrs. William Parker, of Boston, Mass.

Mrs. I. Cameron-Foley has returned from a month's vacation in Florida and has reopened her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel. On Saturday Mrs. Joseph C. McGarrghey entertained for Mrs. Cameron-Foley at a small luncheon at the Carlton Hotel.

Mrs. Thomas R. Cowell, of Tracy Place, Washington, is visiting in New York and is staying at the Savoy-Plaza for a week.

Mrs. Robert W. Taft, of Providence, R. I., is in town for several days' stay and is at the Wardman Park Hotel.

Capt. and Mrs. John Baldwin Neil Benney will leave the middle of March for Fort Riley, Kans., where they will stay until next December. They make their home in Alexandria, Va.

Mr. and Mrs. R. A. Sharron, of Plattsburg, N. Y., who spend a couple of months in Washington every spring, have arrived here with their two children, Janet, and William and have opened their apartment at the Wardman Park.

Lieut. Col. Beverly M. Epes and Mrs. Epes are stopping at the Martinique while he is on duty at the Army Medical Center.

Mrs. Wyatt to Have Charge Of Ushers at Lecture Here

Mrs. Walter Wyatt will be in charge of ushers for the Far East lecture series opening Wednesday at the Shoreham Hotel. She will have assisting her Mrs. Carter Glass, Mrs. William O. Douglas, Mrs. Bruce Smith, Mrs. James Hughes and, as ushers, Miss Mary Jane Stanley, Miss Betty Mills, of Baltimore; Miss Beverly Marshall, Miss Ruth Sims, Mrs. William B. Sims and Miss Achsah Dorsey.

Dr. Ellsworth Huntington, of Yale University, will speak before a sold-out house at the Shoreham on Wednesday at 11 o'clock. Mrs. Gifford Pinchot, chairman of the series will preside.

Plans for an informal semi-buffet luncheon have been completed by Mrs. Francis Cabell Brown and her committee. This type of luncheon constitutes an innovation in Washington social gatherings.

Honored guests of the morning beside the speaker will be: Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Mrs. Harlan F. Stone, Mrs. Cordell Hull, Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, Mrs. Stanley F. Reed, Mrs. Jesse R. Jones, Mrs. Felix Frankfurter, Mrs. Claude Wickard and Mrs. William O. Douglas.

Hostess chairmen of the luncheon are Mrs. Barnet Nover and Mrs. Frank A. Waring. Assisting them will be: Mrs. Basil Manly, Mrs. Frederick Livesey, Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, Mrs. Oscar Chapman, Mrs. Lydia Van Zandt, Mrs. William B. Sims, Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck, Mrs. Adam Gordon, Mrs. Tomas Cajigas, Mrs. Harold Biesemeier, Mrs. Charles J. Brand, Mrs. Frank H. Buck, Mrs. W. C. Burke, Mrs. Harold G. Bowen, Mrs. Warren Lee Pierson, Mrs. Paul McNutt, Mrs. Max C. Lorenz, Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg, Mrs. William C. ## Wed Four Months, Marriage Not Yet Consummated, Husband Sees Physician, Who Finds 'Nothing Wrong;' How Stabilize Union, Before He Leaves on Army Duty?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My husband and I have been married four months. He is an ideal husband in every way,—thoughtful, kind, considerate and eager to do everything that will make my life easier and happier. We both work, as his present position is not very remunerative; but he has prospects of something better in the future.

There is only one discordant note in our lives. The marriage has not yet been consummated, despite the fact that before I was married I went to a physician who performed a routine operation intended to facilitate this end. We have both been very disturbed about the matter, and my husband has talked with a physician, who told him there was nothing wrong with him. But he continues to be unsuccessful. I have brooded a great deal about it,—not because I suffer from sex craving, but because it chagrins me to think my husband is less of a man than thousands of others.

Now, he has received orders from his Draft Board to depart for camp in less than a month. It is very probable that when he leaves our marriage will not have been consummated. We shall be apart for a whole year, and perhaps the same situation will exist when he returns. While I love him very much, the prospect of remaining unmarried (technically speaking) for at least a year, and perhaps indefinitely, does not appeal to me at all. I find myself brooding more and more about the matter. It is beginning to affect my efficiency at work and my disposition at home. I shall appreciate any advice you can offer. Sincerely,

WORRIED WIFE.

Physician's Statement Is Obviously Erroneous

DEAR W. W.: The physician who told your husband "there is nothing wrong with him" was evading the truth. What the interview demonstrated was, merely, the physician's lack of professional preparation for diagnosing such a complaint. Inasmuch as he hesitated even to hazard a guess as to the cause of your husband's current sexual incompetence—having found him, presumably, organically healthy—he should have encouraged him to see either a first-class diagnostician or certain specialists in the study of nervous and emotional disorders. Unfortunately, this physician was not willing to concede the probability that another might succeed in diagnosing a condition which baffled him.

Since, we assume, a routine examination showed your husband to be a man of normal physical endowment, and revealed no evidence of debilitating disease, it is logical to proceed on the theory that (1) either he is suffering from some obscure glandular disorder, which insidiously and elusively lowers his vitality; or (2) he is rendered "psychically" impotent by an ingrained puritanism of attitude regarding sexual relations. For instance, by a notion there is something shameful and degrading about sexual ardor; so that, loving you with all that he conceives to be pure and most aspirational in his nature, he subconsciously feels that he is dishonoring you and the devotion he bears you, whenever he seeks to consummate the marriage, and therefore finds himself helpless in the throes of a conflict between (shall we say?) genuine emotion and sick sentimentality.

There is a possibility, even, that your straightforward, sympathetic desire and efforts to help him overcome his marital ineptitude have further offended his distorted sense of the fitness of things, thus progressively incapacitating him for the lover's role. There are men, you know—and your husband, until now, may be one of them—who would hold it distasteful, or unthinkable, or unseemly, for a "good woman," a "fine woman," a woman worthy of a man's best and greatest love, to be positively cooperative in the marital relationship. They prefer to think of the "ideal woman" as one who is unalterably chaste and cool, in marriage as well as out.

Usually, this is because they have acquired,—from prurient minded sources,—a sordid misconcept of sexuality, as being essentially subhuman and viciously carnal, and hence a chapter of experience to which (they think) no high-minded, gentle-hearted woman either could or would freely give herself. And, distrusting their own undeniable inclination toward a mode of emotional expression which they actually believe to be psychically unclean and spiritually unworthy, —they seek to compensate for their supposed carnality by yoking themselves in marriage to their (so they think) psychological or spiritual antithesis. After which, if they are especially sensitive and neurotic, they may find themselves either helpless to address their supposedly angel-wife, or affronted by the discovery that she is human, after all; and, in comparison to them, downright pagan in her simple acceptance of the so-called Facts of Life.

It is very likely that your husband's impotence has a psychic, rather than an organic or glandular, cause. His mental and emotional attitudes toward matehood probably are "all wrong;" perhaps so wrong that his morbid thought and feeling actually are inducing sick repercussions in his physical body and nervous mechanism. Whether he begins corrective treatment with a psychiatrist, or with an internist who has the sense to see his problem is partially and perhaps largely psychic in origin, is a matter for him to decide. But of this you both may be sure: He can overcome his impotence, if only he will place himself in the care of some honest, able diagnostian, and follow the latter's prescriptions to the letter. Finding the right adviser is his biggest problem—and I shall be glad to give you, by telephone, the names of a couple of reputable men, if you wish to call me. M. H.

Glittering Hostess Gown

Hollywood, Calif.—As introduced by the one Mary Astor wears in "The Great Lie," your next hostess gown for fireside hours at home should be in wool, extremely tailored, and all aglitter. Mary's is fashioned from black and white shepherd's plaid dotted with black sequins. It ties on like a boudoir robe.

A Coat That Will Go Places

With spring just around the corner a lightweight coat is a "must" for many a woman's wardrobe. A light beige or pastel-colored coat is just the thing. As, for example, this honey yellow angora coat with draped back and four roomy pockets. The belt loops over casually like a man's coat belt. Simple in detail, it's very suitable to wear over a suit or print dress this season

Casual Coat in Light Color Popular for Spring Wear

By Jane Driscoll

The casual coat is having its day. It rates top notch as the coat of the season, and right now has put the "dressy" coat in the background. We saw white casuals for snow and now gray and beige are leaders for townwear. As for pastels, they will go anywhere.

Casuals are a "natural" for all-around wear in woolly fleeces and angoras, lightweight camel's hair and smooth herringbone tweeds. Women like them for their simple undated lines because they can dress them up or down. Some are boxy and some are reefers. One model especially popular is the belted reefer with the belt either going all the way around or just at the back.

There are few dolman sleeves in the strictly casual type coats, but armholes are deep and roomy. Shoulders are still strong and gently padded though sloping. Meticulous attention is given to details—coats are truly tailored this season. They owe their tailored air to the importance of suits for spring. A dressy coat just isn't worn with one of the mannish or Glen plaid suits.

If you aren't the casual coat type, here's just a word about dressy coats. They are always proper for wear over a dress, and with the advent of Easter, will be much in the news. There are "dandy" reefers in broadcloth with a waistcoat cut, also fitted collarless coats, double breasted reefers, coats with skirt fullness and hip pockets, and the shirt-waist type with full sleeves and bodice.

Tell Fortunes At Parties

THE CENTER of the stage is yours at parties, get-togethers, when you can tell clever fortunes. Everyone's agog to see what the next card will be. Will it foretell a lucky break, a cherished wish coming true?

Playing the role of gypsy doesn't call for lots of skill, either. You quickly pick up the meanings of a few cards. Then throw in a dash of imagination and presto! you spin a fascinating tale.

Have you turned up a king of spades and then an ace of hearts? The fortune seeker will meet a successful man, certainly eligible, and "It's love at first sight," you tell her. But along comes the serpent in their Eden, the five of spades, a mean old gossip. "Beware!" says the seven of diamonds. "Don't do anything you'll regret."

Now hurry to the next card! Perhaps it's the ten of hearts bringing luck, marriage and a happy ending. But hold your breath that it isn't the ten of spades, the jinx card that spells trouble.

Then what fun to peep into the future by other fascinating ways. The "Magic Circle" fortune has an aura of mystery about it that everyone adores. Just draw a chalk-mark circle on floor or table, have the fortune seeker toss three dice into this "enchanted" area. Now add the numbers on the tops of the dice that land inside, see what the ancient rhyme has to say:

"Seven, adventures to lands unsung,
Eight, arguments, but hold your tongue!"

The complete rhyme for "Magic Circle" is given in our 40-page booklet, LET ME TELL YOUR FORTUNE. Explains fortune-telling with cards, domifioes, tea-leaves. Includes meanings of all cards in the deck and shows how to shuffle them. Has a horoscope for each month, pointers on "crystal gazing."

Send 15c in coin for our booklet, "LET ME TELL YOUR FORTUNE, to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 100 West 10th Street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Voice and Posture Basis of Charm, Says Teacher

Hollywood, Calif.—Sophie Rosenstein, dramatic coach on the Warner lot, considers a lovely voice, and the personality and self-confidence that result from knowing you have a charming one, much more important than mere physical beauty.

First "do" for young Thespians preparing for their first screen test is to practice exercises and diction diligently at home and the studio, but to forget all about "voice" when they step before the camera. Many a career is nipped because a player tried too hard, becoming precise and unnatural. This principle, she says, applies to good speaking at any time.

To overcome self-consciousness, the coach suggests thinking about the meaning of the words spoken, putting thought and feeling behind them, rather than in what their effect upon the listener will be.

Fruit Custards Add Sparkle to Menus

A NEW sparkle is added to menus when fruit milk custards are included as desserts. Golden peach halves baked with melted butter and cocoanut and topped with an orange custard give a lift to the meal and are nutritious as well.

Here is a recipe you will not want to overlook:

Cocoanut Peaches With Orange Custard Sauce

Place 6 canned peach halves cut side down, in a baking pan and pour ⅓-cup melted butter over each. Sprinkle with cocoanut. Bake in a hot oven, 400 degrees for 12 to 15 minutes, or until the cocoanut is delicately browned. Serve hot with Orange Custard Sauce. Makes 6 servings.

Orange Custard Sauce—Scald 2 cups milk in top part of double boiler. Combine 2 slightly beaten eggs, 2-3-cup powdered sugar and ¼-teaspoon salt. Stir in about 1-3 of the hot milk, then add this mixture to remaining hot milk and cook over hot water until mixture thickens and coats spoon. Remove from heat, add a dash of nutmeg, 1 teaspoon vanilla and ¼-teaspoon grated orange rind, serve hot with Cocoanut Peaches. Makes about 2½ cups sauce. Care must be taken not to overcook the custard or it will separate. Remove it from the heat and the bottom of the double boiler as soon as it coats the spoon.

Man in a Million

My husband is the most wonderful man,
He always opens every can,
Without saying a word he shouldn't say,
Or throwing the "blanked" old opener away.

Vitamins, calories, he does not scorn,
For salads he has no hate inborn;
On meat every meal he must not munch,
And he never, never comes home for lunch,

He tells me whether or not it will rain,
If I should wear a wrap, or from one abstain,
Whether for dinner to have steak or roast,
What to do about that committee post.

He knows perfectly well a $2 hat,
Is in the same class with a quarter cravat;
And that Nylon hose don't grow on trees,
Or even come out of the air with the greatest of ease.

His political views are neither loud nor homespun,
And in telling exactly what should be done,
He does not pace up and down the room,
Nor at radio speakers does he fume.

He never does the same joke relate,
Nor tell long tales of fish and bait;
Nor in company prim and slightly wheezy,
Does he start the one that makes me uneasy.

He's smart enough to bring in the cash,
And in social life to cut quite a dash;
But at home dumb enough to avoid all woe,
By not catching on to what he shouldn't know.

He's not too good to stretch the truth,
To remark on my perpetual youth;
And Hedy Lamarr always leaves him cold,
Ann Corio he thinks is much too bold.

But best of all he is not wowed
By that tricky siren in our crowd,
He knows her just for what she is,
And strictly tends to his own biz.

'Wicked' Fashions For Future in Hollywood Show

Hollywood, Calif.—At the "Fashion Futures" showing, held recently at the Ambassador, interesting creations by Warner Bros.' three noted designers were among those foretelling what women will wear before 1941 limps into the past.

Two numbers from Orry-Kelly's talented hand are called "California Wine" and "Gaby de Lys." The first named, which will be worn by Merle Oberon in "Affectionately Yours," shows a white souffle shirtmaker posed over a nude crepe slip encrusted with sequins. The second gown is a modern interpretation of 1914's tunic with hobble skirt. This is in black silk surah with slender skirt, knee-length tunic and pink tulle yoke touched with a pink rose. Maris Wrixon, who modeled the gown, wore long pink suede gloves.

"Missionary's Downfall" is the facetious name Howard Shoup gives to his beautifully styled Javanese pajamas. The silhouette includes harem trousers and loose jacket of red and green printed jersey strewn with gold spangles, and a white cotton skirt. Over all a flowing white cape.

Slim by Balancing Calories; Rigorous Diet Not Necessary

By Ida Jean Kain

I RESENT it when someone says, with a mixture of triumph and apology, "I have reduced, but I didn't do it on your diet." That sounds as if I had the idea that you could reduce only by going on a diet—and preferably my diet!

Of course, you don't have to go on a diet of any kind in order to take off weight. You can do it simply by following your regular bill of fare but cutting down on the extras or by cutting out the food that is boosting the calories too high.

A case in point is that of a reducer who got along fine merely by streamlining her dinner and eating as usual for the other two meals. A busy executive found that all he had to do to reduce was leave off the malt beverage. He clipped off three pounds a week without making any other change in his menus.

She Quit Butter

A woman who loves butter has made it a practice to take only one pat, one-fourth inch thick, in place of the usual two pats with each meal. Result: She is losing a pound a week regularly—and she's not on a diet! Many a reducer turns the trend of the scales by cutting out the desserts and pastries.

Out in Hollywood, where weight is a bugaboo, a good percentage of the stars have the habit of taking a generous salad as their first course. That takes the edge off the appetite and makes it less easy to overeat of the more fattening dishes. Another strict rule among the film people is to limit the quantities of liquid taken with the meal. They say this not only helps them to control their weight but keeps them from having that "heavy feeling."

Any change in eating that reduces your calories below the amount you use for energy will let you lose weight. For example, if you are in the habit of making away with two slices of bread and butter per meal, and cut down to one, you are taking at least 375 calories out of your daily diet. If that number of subtracted calories is below the number you require, you can lose half a pound a week—perhaps more.

Watch Those Starches

You can make a big dent in the calories by restricting the starchy foods. It's a smart slimming rule never to take more than one starchy food at the same meal. When you have a filling serving of spaghetti, leave off the bread.

Scan your menus closely to see whether you are eating too many fats, sweets or high calorie beverages. Perhaps you are not taking the extras at mealtime, but sandwiching them in between. If you will be honest with yourself, you can easily put your finger on the dietary excess that has caused your weight to climb. Change that habit and you'll slim down. It's not what you'd call "going on a diet," but it gets results and may be easier for you than following a specified list of foods.

Defense Raids Other Agencies for Hired Help

Defense agencies are making personnel raids on other Government departments. And the defense agencies are getting the employes because they either offer them better salaries or they offer appointments that will lead to a permanent Civil Service status. Personnel officials at the Office of Production Management frankly admit they have been raiding other Government agencies for experienced secretaries. OPM usually pays a grade higher than the employe is receiving. Even dollar-a-year men can't give Government jobs to their own private secretaries and OPM personnel chiefs have been in a spot trying to round up crack secretaries who know Government procedure.

Fact is that OPM believes it has about exhausted the supply of first-class Government secretaries who have Civil Service and who are willing to leave their present jobs. But hundreds more will be needed and it is now planned to set up a school at the defense agency to train girls to be good secretaries. Most agencies train new personnel before they are put on a job.

Census Bureau also is being raided. The bureau is in a very peculiar position. It has nearly 9,000 temporary employes here and it has been laying off several hundred each pay day. However, Census needs about 250 additional tabulating machine operators for its night force and it is unable to get them now through Civil Service. As if the bureau didn't have enough trouble, both the War and Navy Departments have served notice they're going to take over hundreds of the machine operators. And Census officials have had to agree to the proposed mass transfer of employes, for defense comes first in Washington today. Census has nearly 4,500 machine tabulators, more than any agency in Washington.

War and Navy Departments are offering the machine operators probational indefinite appointments which will lead to full Civil Service status within six months. No temporary employe can be given full Civil Service status at Census even though the employes have to be chosen from merit rolls or approved by the commission. Census may have to train new employes to replace those transferred to defense agencies unless the commission can furnish recruits.

More Defense Items

A health program for rejected draftees is being studied by Paul McNutt's Health and Medical Committee . . . OPM was forced to hire 30 secretaries temporarily who didn't have a Civil Service standing. The commission approved the hiring because it couldn't supply the demand, but the secretaries will have to be dismissed after 30 days . . . OPM's production division is expected to increase its comparatively small staff to 500 employes soon . . . During the last war the Priorities Division had 3,000 employes. The division now has only several hundred workers but it's bound to increase its staff sharply . . . OPM and its related divisions are now expected to hire nearly 2,000 additional employes before July 1.

OPM soon will appoint four assistant general counsels to John Lord O'Brien. The first assistant will be Herbert S. Marks, 32-year-old New Dealer who has been assistant general counsel of TVA and general counsel of Bonneville Power Authority. For the past year he has been with Associated Gas & Electric Co. Fred Eaton, a Wall Street attorney, will be appointed assistant general counsel in charge of production and Geoffrey Smith will be assistant general counsel in charge of priorities. Milton Katz, another youthful New Dealer, will be assistant general counsel in charge of purchases. He will be on a part-time basis and will continue teaching at Harvard Law School. Katz has held legal jobs at NRA, SEC, TNEC and Justice.

His friends are trying to get Brain-Truster Tom Corcoran a job at the Navy Department to coordinate plane production. The job isn't expected to be created for several weeks. Meantime, his partner, Ben Cohen, can have the SEC chairmanship, his friends say. Cohen isn't expected to return from London for two or three months.

FBI is up against it for space. It is overflowing now in several buildings and it has plans to increase its staff by several hundred G-Men and clerical employes.

Citizens Will Mark Birth Of Federation

Group to Celebrate 31st Anniversary On Wednesday At Mayflower

The Federation of Citizens Associations will observe its thirty-first anniversary with a dinner at the Mayflower on Wednesday, while 19 member associations plan to hold their regular monthly meetings.

Judge Nathan Cayton, of the District Municipal Court, will be the principal speaker at the dinner. An entertainment program will include music by the Pepco Glee Club and the Mayflower Orchestra, according to Chairman James A. Crooks.

Guests of honor who have accepted invitations include Representatives Jennings Randolph (Democrat), W. Va.; Everett M. Dirksen (Republican), Illinois, and Thomas D'Alesandro (Democrat), Maryland; Senators Arthur Capper (Republican), Kansas, and Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada; Fire Chief Stephen T. Porter, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, William Van Duzer, Alexander F. Jones and Herbert F. Corn.

Eight citizens associations will meet tonight.

Dupont Circle citizens will hear a talk by Washington I. Cleveland, manager of the American Automobile Association, at 4:30 p. m. The Takoma, D. C. association will nominate officers and discuss bus service to their area.

Members of the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown will hear Miss Katherine R. Lewis of the Red Cross speak on District Red Cross activities. Manor Park citizens will act on the transportation in their sector and discuss the Commissioners' tax-exempt property report.

On Tuesday, R. E. A. Engineer Francis J. Sette will speak on "a subway as the solution to the D. C. traffic problem" before the Columbia Heights citizens organization.

Two associations, Friendship and the Oldest Inhabitants, will meet Wednesday, the night of the Federation dinner. Friendship citizens will hear a report on new cross-town bus developments by Lynn B. Morris, chairman of the public utilities committee.

The Bradbury Heights meeting, scheduled for Thursday night, has been postponed until March 10, when the speaker will be Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, it was announced by President Henry W. Austin.

Attainment of the Jewish Community Center's current membership goal of nearly 2,000 was celebrated last night at the Mayflower Hotel with a dinner and dance for 100 workers in the drive.

Four workers were presented with gifts for signing up the largest number of new members. They were Natie Brown, of the physical education department; Mrs. Esther Horowitz, of the service council, and the Misses Pearl Rappaport and Erma Freedman, of the girls' club.

Burnett Siman and Dr. Maurice Coldberg were cochairmen of the drive. Among the guests last night were Benjamin Ourisman, president of the Center; Simon Hirshman, vice president; Edward Rosenblum, executive director, and George Cohen and Tim Bowers, of the Jewish Welfare Board.

In a speech of congratulation to the workers, Siman said a duty of the center is to provide recreational and social facilities for Jewish men in the armed services in the Washington area.

The dinner was given the workers by an anonymous donor. A dance followed.

D. C. Printers Get Wage Rise, Paid Vacations

Approximately 700 printers on Washington's four newspapers will receive two weeks' vacation with pay and a raise of $1 per week in a new three-year contract signed between Columbia Typographical Union, No. 101, and the publishers, it was announced last night.

The wage increase for newspaper printers will become effective November 11 of this year. Compositors in the book and job industry were recently granted a wage increase by Joseph P. Tumulty, who acted as arbiter.

The wage increase for all classes of printers will become effective November 11 of this year.

W. C. George, of the Times-Herald, was chairman of the printers' committee. C. C. Boysen, comptroller of The Post, was chairman of the committee for the publishers.

Officers of the union commended the publishers for their "cooperation in the peaceful progress' of the union. The union is the oldest in North America. It was founded in 1815.

Two Art Exhibits Open Tomorrow At WPA Galleries

Coats Taken From Church, Store Robbed

Clothing was taken from two Washington churches during services, some rare newspapers telling of Lincoln's death were stolen from a public school, and numerous larcenies were reported to police yesterday as a wave of minor thefts swept the Capital.

John B. Cullen, of 3800 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest, reported the loss of his coat, overcoat and fountain pen from the choir loft of St. Matthew's Church as he attended services there yesterday. Elmer L. Hennessy, of 3800 Fourteenth Street Northwest, reported the loss of an overcoat under similar circumstances at the Church of the Covenant.

Mrs. Elva C. Wells, assistant principal at Roosevelt High School, notified police early yesterday that several old letters written by Presidents Garfield and Hayes, as well as some rare newspapers announcing the death of President Lincoln, were stolen from her office at the school. The thieves, believed to be young boys, entered by breaking a window.

Sometime between Saturday night and noon yesterday a truck owned by Peoples Drug Stores was broken into and several hundred dollars worth of merchandise stolen. Entry was gained by forcing a lock.

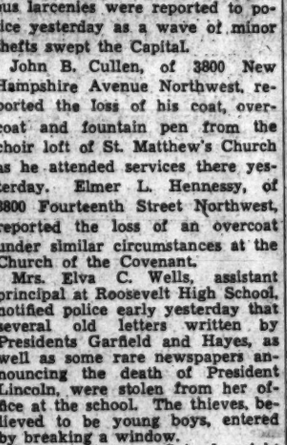

A visitor to Washington, Frank P. Grier, of Atlanta, Ga., reported that his automobile was broken into while parked at New Jersey and F Street Northwest sometime Saturday night and $75 worth of clothing taken.

Biagio Ambrogi, proprietor of Ambrogi's Delicatessen at 238 Rhode Island Avenue Northwest, notified police that the store was entered by thieves who broke the front door glass early yesterday and took $75 from the cash register.

637 Recruited By Colored Group

The Washington branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, which is conducting a drive for 3,000 members, thus far has enrolled 637 recruits, it was announced yesterday.

Next meeting of the campaign will be held at the Y. M. C. A., 1816 Twelfth Street Northwest, tomorrow at 8:30 p. m.

Draft Debate Stirs Catholic Youth Parley

Student Who'd 'Run From Enemy' Called Un-American at Defense Conference

An unscheduled but heated debate over selective service, in which charges of un-Americanism were hurled, yesterday climaxed an all-day conference of 400 Catholic college students on defense in a democracy.

The youths, who came from ten nearby colleges, passed up a warm, sunny Sunday outdoors to jam McMahon Hall Auditorium at Catholic University and argue the basic principles of democratic living. The forum was sponsored by the National Federation of Catholic College Students.

The battle over selective service was launched by John Oberg, of Catholic University, who arose in the back of the auditorium near the end of the afternoon session to criticize the forum for forgetting about "the importance of the individual in a democracy."

Oberg said the Federal Government had assumed so much power that individual rights and liberties had little meaning. As a result, he said, youth faces compulsory military training and war.

"I'm not against national selective service . . . much," he said dryly. "I want to learn to shoot straight back over my shoulder as I run away from the enemy. . . .

"I'm not afraid to confess that I'm scared of war. It's no longer a matter of riding out on a white charger with a lady-fair's ribbon. There's nothing glorious about war today."

Sam Murray, of Georgetown University, jumped to his feet.

"I think the last speaker's remarks were most un-American," he shouted at Chairman Vernon Von Drehle, of Catholic University. "I'd like him to enlarge on them."

"Doesn't he think democracy is worth defending," he cried. "If this country were invaded, would he stick that gun over his shoulder and fire backwards?"

Thomas Rover, of Georgetown University, interjected that Oberg's basic fallacy lay in accepting the "outworn thesis" advanced by eighteenth century liberalism that "the government which governs least is that which governs best."

He said that changed conditions today made it necessary for governmental authority to expand.

Earlier, Lawrence Boland, of Catholic University, urged the expansion of the National Federation of Catholic College Students "so that the people will know that all youth is represented by the opinions and resolutions of the American Youth Congress."

Boland said that a "youth movement" was very important because "the benefits of social reform are threatened by international upheaval" and because "we see the need of youth rallying to the defense of its own principles."

At the morning session, attempts by several students to define the basis of democracy brought forth agreement that the essential principle involved is acceptance of the "intrinsic value and dignity of the human being."

Jewish Society Opens Fund Drive To Aid Refugees

A Nation-wide drive for its $1,000,000 Rescue Through Emigration Fund was launched yesterday by H. I. A. S. (Hebrew Sheltering Immigrant Aid Society of America). Joseph A. Wilner, of Washington, and Isidore Hershfield, Washington representative of the organization, head the campaign committee.

Funds will be used in aiding Jewish refugees now stranded in unoccupied France and Portugal. Last year H. I. A. S. helped to rehabilitate 75,000 refugees, saving them from concentration camps.

Locally, the drive will be directed by Dr. Rudolph Kornblith, assisted by Wilner, Hershfield, Rabbi Isadore Breslau, Bernard Danzansky, Morris Garfinckle, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, Fred S. Geichner, Hyman Goldman, Paul Himmelfarb, Edmund I. Kaufmann, Louis Kraft, Maurice Mosser, I. Joseph Mazo, the Rev. Louis Novick, Edward Rosenblum, John M. Safer, Samuel T. Schwartz, Louis Spiegler, Charles J. Stein and Jeremiah Weitz.

4-Year-Old Virginia Sees D.C. —Not to Mention the Movies

Four-year-old Virginia Saul went to the movies yesterday.

Before she returned to her home at 938 New York Avenue, she had seen not only the movies, but the Second Precinct Station, the Women's Bureau and the Receiving Home for Children—all in one night.

The Cook's Tour phase of Virginia's adventures began after the movies when a little colored girl found her wandering at Seventh and M Streets Northwest. The colored girl—police forgot to ask her name—remembered that when she got lost the formula was—go to the Second Precinct. The colored girl applied the formula.

The Second Precinct police took Virginia to the Women's Bureau and, when there were no calls for her there, to the Receiving Home. At 10:15 p. m. frantic Mrs. Virginia Saul, the mother, called at the precinct, explaining that little Virginia had become separated from an older brother en route home.

Van Loon Is Commentator At National Symphony Concert

By Roy C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Sunday afternoon in Constitution Hall. Soloist: Grace Castagnetta. Commentator: Hendrik Willem van Loon. Program: Passacaglia and Fugue in C minor (Bach), Concerto in D minor for piano (Bach), Variations on a Nursery Rhyme for piano and orchestra (Dohnanyi), Overture to "Rienzi" (Wagner).

Propaganda for the music of Sebastian Bach was carried on at yesterday's concert of the National Symphony Orchestra both by Hans Kindler, who devoted the first half of the program to the C minor passacaglia and fugue and the D minor piano concerto, and by his cousin, Hendrik Willem van Loon, who addressed the audience in his inimitable informal manner after the intermission. Grace Castagnetta, the dynamic little American pianist, was an adjutant in the good cause through her crisp and clear exposition of the solo part in the concerto.

BROWN

The reader may wonder why Bach is at this day in need of propagandists. The choice of the word was Dr. Van Loon's and his explanation of it was logical. Beginning with the statement that one of his specialties was speaking on unmusical subjects at musical gatherings, he launched into one of his characteristic talks of which the peculiar charm cannot be reproduced by any stenographic report. The burden of his remarks was the necessity of maintaining democratic standards at a time when they are being assailed, and he cited Bach as an exemplar of sturdy independence and since nature. In this music, he said, we find the unmistakable assertion of Bach's invincible belief in mankind and common decency.

Making reference to the theory that music is a means of escape from our problems, he declared that great music should reinforce our determination to lead the good life. In the utter honesty and in the serene spirituality of Bach's music we find a basis for our conviction in the ultimate triumph of good over evil. Listening to music of this kind, he said, was not an escape from reality but a direct contact with eternal verities.

Dr. Van Loon's humor played about his subject with jovial flashes. He is a laughing philosopher in the sense that he believes that humor and philosophy are perfectly compatible. He had his auditors chuckling one moment and grave the next. His stimulating comments included the definition of Americanism as "the sum total of the feelings, opinions, ideas and ideals of decent, cheerful, self-respecting Americans."

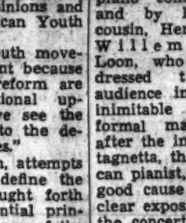

Miss Castagnetta, who did so well in the Bach concerto, deepened one's impression of her technical skill and her admirable musicianship by her performance in Erno von Dohnanyi's variations on the old song, "Ah, vous dirai-je, maman." This is the same tune upon which Mozart wrote a dozen variations for the piano, but Mozart merely trifled idly with a theme which Dohnanyi turned into an elaborate fantasia of remarkable ingenuity. The work is scintillant with wit and delightfully colored with every instrumental resource.

High Ratings Given By Duke U. to 19 D. C. Area Students

Eight Washington and 11 Maryland students at Duke University, Durham, N. C., have been named to the dean's list, it was announced yesterday. The rating, based on scholastic attainment, carries with it the privilege of voluntary class attendance.

Assembly To Hear D.C. Vote Backers

House Sponsors Of Suffrage Bills To Address Second Meeting of Group

Congressional sponsors of the Sumner-Capper and d'Alesandro District suffrage bills will address the second meeting of the Municipal Assembly March 19, Sefton Darr, temporary chairman, said last night.

The Congressmen and other officials will lead a panel discussion on "suffrage in the District" at the meeting in the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K Streets Northwest.

A tentative constitution also will be voted on at the meeting by representatives of civic, church and fraternal groups, Darr said. Delegates must bring credentials from their organizations in order to vote.

Provisions of the newly-organized assembly's proposed constitution stipulate that "any functioning organization, except political parties, whose membership includes 30 or more citizens of the District" shall be eligible to send representatives.

Final organizational plans are expected to be completed at the meeting, originally scheduled for this Wednesday, but postponed until next week because of the Federation of Citizens dinner.

Purposes of the assembly, as outlined in the tentative constitution, are "to stimulate greater citizen interest; more responsible and vigorous organized group activity with reference to local civic affairs; to provide a means for crystallizing an informed public opinion on issues of major concern to the community; and to serve as an agency for the effective expression of the community will regarding questions of public policy."

Standing assembly committees on suffrage, fiscal affairs, health, welfare, housing, standards of living, education, labor, civil liberties, community planning and general legislation will be appointed at the meeting.

These committees, Darr said, will handle most of the routine business of the assembly, leaving general meetings open for panel discussions on current issues for presenting authoritative pros and cons.

'The Lady Eve' Attempts That Old Apple Business

Paramount Thinly Veils Drama Desks' Downfall; Miss Bankhead to Return in Vicious 'Foxes;' This, That and the Other About the Theater

SHE "RIBBED" ADAM 'way back yonder and almost got away with it with us. When that nice red apple, all done up in a red-ribboned, cellophane display case, like an orchid, was discovered on the desk Saturday, we began to wonder what doctor it was that was being given the old heave-ho. Then we read the cryptic card that accompanied the pretentious package and learned that it was from "The Lady Eve." This department is no part of any Garden of Eden, but remotely remembers something of what happened there and so let somebody else eat the apple—just in case.

BELL

Now it comes out that "The Lady Eve" is merely the item that heads the list of Paramount productions that are to decorate the Loew screens in impending weeks and that some prankish press agent thought an apple would be a fruitful means of bringing the matter to the attention of our appetite. It didn't work and no mention whatever will be made here of the incident.

So it seems that "The Lady Eve" is the latest charade to spring full-grown from the brain of that stupendous fellow, Preston Sturges. It is hailed as the third consecutive hit he has spawned. The other two were "The Great McGinty" and "Christmas in July." The costellar roles are played by Barbara Stanwyck and Henry Fonda. If I could have had any assurance that it was Barbara who sent it to me, I would have eaten that apple myself.

But, after all, that was only the beginning of it. What whoever it was evidently was trying to get over was that Paramount is coming to bat also with "The Road to Zanzibar," with Bing Crosby, Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour; "Shepherd of the Hills," in Technicolor, with John Wayne, Betty Field and Harry Carey; "Caught in the Draft," with Bob Hope and Dorothy Lamour again; "Aloma of the South Seas," also in Technicolor, with the inevitable Miss Lamour and Jon Hall; "Las Vegas Nights," with Tommy Dorsey and His Orchestra, Phil Regan and Constance Moore; "I Wanted Wings," with Ray Milland, William Holden, Wayne Morris, Brian Donlevy, Constance Moore and Veronica Lake, and "Nurses Don't Tell"—which, everything considered, is probably just as well—with Ann Shirley and Richard Carlson. And whoever would have thought an apple could have started all this!

As long ago as last Friday, Bess Davis Schreiner, local sales manager for the Theater Guild-American Theater Society, was all shook up and nervous because she was fearful that subscribers would be fearful about their tickets for "Twelfth Night." If those tickets have not been received by now they probably will be on the next mail. The important thing, however, is that exchanges will not be possible in the case of this Helen Hayes-Maurice Evans costarrer, because the demand for seats is the largest in the history of the Theater Guild-A. T. S. plays. You will have to play them as they lie and like it.

Among the happier announcements of the season at the National is the one that heralds the return of Tallulah Bankhead in the role of the implacable Regina Giddens in Lillian Hellman's acid play of "The Little Foxes," the week of March 17. Miss Bankhead, one of this column's favorite persons, has a peculiar penchant for mistaking this desk for a Congressman, but we'll dare that aspersion just for the fun of seeing her again. And seeing her again always is fun—of the most exciting and explosive sort. I don't know where Husband John Emery is, but I hope he will be with her. He's another nice guy.

Harold Gould, stentor of the Charlie Olive enterprises in the Capital, and they include all of the Kogod and Burka projects, is practically all aquiver over the fact that "Gone With the Wind" will play the Apex Theater on March 12, 13 and 14. "Gone With the Wind," in case you haven't heard, is a minor item that consumes only 3 hours and 47 minutes of running time on the screen and last year accumulated all of the Academy Awards that weren't red-hot or nailed down—and none was.

"The Man Who Came to Dinner" continues to accentuate the acidulous aftermaths of his accidental invitation to the home of the Stanleys, for a second week at the National, beginning tonight. Having pretty thoroughly drained our reservoir of reticence in cheers for the rambunctious ribaldries of the George S. Kaufman-Moss Hart impishly impudent comedy, we probably will not attempt another review. The original one can be found in last Tuesday's Post. Or, if that is too much bother, it may be discovered splattered all over that three-sheet that stands in front of the National's entrance—or did. Whatever was said about Alexander Woollcott, playing himself; Doris Nolan, Edith Atwater, Erik Rhodes and the others in the cast, and as we vaguely recall it, we pulled no panegyrics, only expressed the half of it. The thing is a "must"—if you can get in.

Signs-of-the-Times Note

On the window of a North Washington renovator: "Cleaners of Distinction." Since when has distinction needed any cleaning?

Miss Bergman, It Seems, Still Plays the Piano

WARNER BAXTER, SUSAN HAYWARD, RICHARD DENNING, INGRID BERMAN as they will be seen in the principal roles in "Adam Had Four Sons," the Columbia production opening its first Washington engagement Friday on the screen at the Earle Theater. Miss Bergman, it will be noted, once more is seated at the keyboard, just as she was in "Intermezzo," her single, earlier, American film vehicle which won her such high acclaim.

News Shifts To Far East At Trans-Lux

News flashes on the Far East crisis, with special camera shots of the French Indo China-Thailand truce conference, with Japanese influence in evidence, and spectacular defense preparations at Singapore, comprise the meatiest portion of the fare this week at the Trans-Lux Theater. Other important and extra interesting shots are of General Weygand, inspecting French colonial troops in Darkar, and some revealing flashes of the mysterious conditions on the island of Martinique, in the Caribbean.

The remainder of the 35 minutes of news pictures runs an entertaining gamut from sports to styles. There are fine interior pictures of the new Mellon Art Gallery, soon to be opened to the public; Canada speeds "Hurricanes" (planes) to Britain, Annapolis middies are taught fencing, quadruplets are born in Kentucky and a 2-year-old baby swims and dives in deep water with amazing skill.

In the realm of the short films, there is an educational travelog about the hidden city of Peru, called "Trailing the Incas"; a new movie personality sequence, pictured at Mary Pickford's California estate; an entirely delightful subject on that lovable type of dog, the cocker spaniel, and a near-riotous comedy, color cartoon, "The Helping Paw."

Gayety

After an absence of almost a year, the one and only Valerie Parks returns here after her many triumphs in the Broadway burlesque playhouses and points west. With her, Miss Parks brings a show studded with stars and a revue that ranks among the best seen at the Gayety this season.

Blonde and lovely, Valerie's musical specialities are definitely inimitable. Possessing a rare personality and million-dollar smile, Miss Parks scores heavily in each and every appearance—in fact, each one is a show-stopper. We might add that Valerie's wardrobe, as usual, is stunning and her musical score quite in keeping with her spectacular beauty parades.

Billy Hagen, one of burlesque's outstanding comedians, and clever Sammy Smith, a newcomer here, turn in some hilarious comedy moments. Hagen, with the assistance of clever Charlie Harris, offers some of his funniest scenes, including the Chinese Theater "bit," a real laugh riot.

On the distaff side of the bill are such stunners as Olga Brace, Peggy Wallace and Patricia Morgan. Miss Brace and Miss Morgan offer several display routines, while Miss Wallace proves a valuable asset in the talking sequences.

Leonard Lyons:

New York, March 3.

BUSINESS DEPT.: Last week Mr. and Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart decided to present an unusual gift to some Long Island friends. Mrs. Stewart therefore telephoned Barney Greengrass, who is famed for his smoked salmon and delicatessen—and ordered two dozen kosher frankfurters . . . Mr. Greengrass reported that he had excellent frankfurters, but no kosher ones. "Sorry, but I want kosher ones," said Mrs. Stewart . . . "But these are just as good," the delicatessen man assured. And so for ten minutes Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart repeated her insistence upon kosher frankfurters, while Mr. Barney Greengrass protested that the non-kosher ones were just as good.

SOCIAL NOTES: In "My Day," Eleanor Roosevelt reported the presence of Alexander Woollcott in the White House and referred to the impishness which emerges whenever he is displeased . . . Whether impish or not, Mr. Woollcott has taken over the White House. He gave a dinner there for his friends today and graciously consented to include the President and Eleanor among the guests . . . Woollcott and his man, Joe Hennessey, will remain at the White House until the Washington run of the play is over. "I'm here," he explained, "by squatter's rights."

TRAVEL DEPARTMENT: Thornton Wilder will leave for South America on a three-month assignment from the State Department. His assignment covers three countries—Colombia, Ecuador and Peru . . . For the past eight weeks, in preparation for his special job, Wilder has been taking Spanish lessons . . . Last night he supped with Ruth Gordon, Orson Welles and Dolores del Rio. "A good-will assignment is a tough job," Wilder was told. "What's the first thing you're going to do?" . . . "First," suggested Miss Gordon, "tell 'em that you know Orson Welles and Dolores del Rio. But on second thought, you'd better not—because they wouldn't believe you."

SPORTS DEPT.: A young New England heavyweight fighter, weighing 230 pounds, now has six owner-managers. The six are Wolcott Gibbs, Lucius Beebe, Ann Honeycutt, her husband and two other regulars at the Artists and Writers Club . . . Each contributed $5 a week for his support until he's ready to emerge and be matched.

LOCAL NEWS: Bill Bullitt's new Federal appointment will be announced in 10 days . . . Magnesium and zinc will be the next products tapped by the Priorities Board of the OPM . . . Jan Valtin, author of "Out of the Night," is completing a second book—about his experiences since the time he started writing the first one . . . Eugene Lyons' newest will be called "The Incredible Revolution," in which he will attack Hollywood and Broadway leftists . . . Publishers are planning to release a collection of Roosevelt's and Churchill's speeches, in one volume . . . Charles LeMaire is opening a swanky midtown dress shop . . . The Mrs. Henry Smith of Green Island, N. Y.—whose "Information Please" question stumped President MacCracken of Vassar—is a Vassar alumna.

POLITICS: When Mayor LaGuardia started to climb the steel ladders on the Second Avenue elevated, at the ceremonies marking the tearing down of that system of transit, he slipped and had trouble getting a foothold . . . "What's the matter, Mr. Mayor?" Fiorello was asked. "Is that ladder too straight?" . . . "Hell, no," answered LaGuardia. "How d'you think I got to be Mayor?"

THEATER DEPT.: John LaTouche, who wrote the lyrics for "Cabin in the Sky," recently was married to the daughter of Stanton Griffis, the Paramount official. Griffis tendered a party for them, and invited 300 of his friends. LaTouche knew hardly any of them . . . He walked from group to group, staring at the notables . . . In one corner, he saw Katharine Cornell, Gilbert Miller and Brock Pemberton, approached the trio, and asked, politely: "Drink?" Pemberton's acknowledgment to the guest of honor was "No . . . er . . . sonny. No, thank you."

DRAMA DEPT.: Meyer Weisgal devoted more than four years to the realization of his production of "The Eternal Road"—obtaining the rights to Franz Werfel's play, signing Max Reinhardt, Norman Bel Geddes and Kurt Weill, and raising $500,000. But one day a marshal arrived at Weisgal's production office and removed all the furniture. In that empty, forlorn office, without even a chair, he walked the floor, wondering by what miracle he could raise an additional $20,000, without which the curtain would not be permitted to rise that night . . . The door opened, and in came a committee with a bronze plaque for him, memorializing his valiant tireless and unselfish services. "Is it possible to remove my name and substitute another?" Weisgal asked . . . The astonished committee informed him that it was unusual but possible. Within the hour Weisgal had removed his own name and substituted that of a wealthy man who had backed part of the production cost. The committee proceeded to that man's office, and presented the plaque to him. Weisgal waited, phoned the man—and raised the $20,000.

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 2 (INS).—If Walter Pidgeon weren't such a nice person I'd begin to dislike him. Every time one of Walter's pictures comes up the gals on my staff all insist on doing the Sunday interview with him and I want to call on him myself. But joking aside, I just heard this morning that the popular Mr. Pidgeon is going visiting off his home lot, M.-G.-M., because Twentieth Century-Fox has borrowed him for "Man Hunt."

PARSONS

The old fashioned siren who made the Northwest Mounted look like an amateur when it came to getting her man, is dead. In her place is a smoother edition, one who gets her man all right but without the obvious effort that our sirens of yesterday put into their man-hunting escapades. Mona Maris, the dark eyed Argentine actress, belongs to the new school, as she proved in "Flight from Destiny." Now she goes into "Underground" at Warners

Robert Sterling is said to be carrying the torch for Gene Tierney since their elopement plans were called off last week. Be that as it may the young man will be too busy to be a torch carrier because M.-G.-M. is putting him to work in the biggest role of his career in "Men from the City." Young Sterling is really a good looking boy and they think he's going places at Culver City.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The rafters fairly rang when Jane Darwell walked up to accept her gold Oscar for Ma Joad, the best femme supporting role, showing how much she is loved in the industry. She certainly was dressed up in blue lace with orchids; Bob Hope was never funnier but when they presented him with a placque for his many benefits. He was so touched for once he couldn't say a word; Jack Oakie's Venita was so disappointed that Jack didn't get the gold Oscar and so were his friends, Alice Faye, Cesar Romero and Tyrone Power, who work with him at Twentieth Century-Fox studios. Better luck next year, Jack; no one can dispute that Walter Brennan's characterization of Judge Bean in "The Westerner" was a high spot in last year's movies; Fred Quimby, who won the award for "The Milky Way," the first cartoon to wrest honors from Walt Disney, has been in the business even longer than I have and that's a record.

Just had a letter from Sharon Lynn who said she hoped her husband, Barney Glazer, would win the prize for the best original story because she had been sick so long and he had had so much trouble. Well, Barney won a gold Oscar all right, for "Arise My Love"—the best original story; Carmen Miranda's silver turban, which looked like the top of a Christmas tree, had everyone out of their seats; Cesar Romero brought Alice Faye, who was much in demand by the photographers; Carole Landis sat next to Maj. Gen. J. O. Mauborgne and all his colonels, lieutenants, etc., were much interested in seeing him talk to her animatedly.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

That Girl Again

PEGGY MORAN, who climbed to fame in "The Trail of the Vigilantes" and now is eagerly awaiting the "leading-lady" roles Universal is persistently seeking for her. Figures—box-office, that is—don't lie.

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, March 2.

Paramount's beginning to realize Producer Paul Jones is a quiet worker who gets results. He's one of the most unassuming men I know, but he produced "The Great McGinty," "Christmas in July," "The Lady Eve," and "The Road to Zanzibar." So Paul's up for a long-term contract.

HOPPER

If Warners accept Mark Hellinger's resignation, he'll also produce for Paramount. He's had an enviable record of hits, and he and Buddy De Sylva have been friends for lo these many years.

When I asked Buddy De Sylva why he took on the burden of being head of Paramount, he said, "Oh, I don't know. It's interesting to tackle something new." "Yes, but why a man like you, who's written such song hits as 'April Showers,' 'When Day Is Done,' and dozens more, and who has three smash musicals running on Broadway at the same time ('Panama Hattie,' 'Louisiana Purchase' and 'DuBarry Was a Lady'), should go into slavery, I can't—and yet I can—understand. I'll bet you were flattered into it." And what I got was a gale of laughter.

I never knew a man to enjoy his vacation more than Pat O'Brien, and boy—how he's earned one! He's made 47 pictures at Warners in seven years, and all were important parts. Some didn't suit, some he didn't want to do; but he never sulked, let the company down, nor turned in a bad performance. He's in for a terrific reception in Milwaukee and Chicago when he appears in those cities a few weeks from now.

Garbo's actions while shopping and doing New York town have brought an avalanche of publicity for the lady. She'd better watch her step or she may find herself alone in her native land, Sweden.

Gene Markey has not only a memory but a heart. He's trying to bring back Gloria Swanson in "Tropic Interlude" and star Ina Claire in "Eadie Was a Lady." If you'll remember your Hollywood history, at one time Gene was reported engaged to both these ladies. No, not at the same time.

Bing Crosby and his studio aren't seeing quite eye to eye these days. Bing wants to do "Honey Boy Evans," an old minstrel character.

Genevieve Tobin couldn't be happier. The wives of the faculty at U. S. C. have finally broken down and invited her to be guest of honor at a tea. You see, they've fallen in a big way for her husband, Bill Keighley who lectures there about the movies.

The Burlington Liars' Club, of Burlington, Wis., are asking for the premiere of Bette Davis' picture, "The Great Lie." They promise some whoppers.

Bob Taplinger's party for Quentin Reynolds was a honey. While some cats were meowing, there were more attractive men present than I've seen in a long time. Besides the guest of honor, who is a battalion of good humor, information, and vitality in himself, and his young brother Jimmy (who had eyes for no one but Priscilla Lane), there were Sam Goldwyn's Eastern lawyer, Mark Eisner, who's been bronzed to mahogany by the Arizona sun—and offered a screen role (wish he'd take it); Eddie Robinson, with a New York pallor after fighting flu back there, and Gladys with a new military suit—white braid and tassels over one shoulder—and a becoming pompadour.

Also the Bob Montgomerys, torn between London and their family; Ann Warner, batted in a miniature black coachman's lid; Mrs. Jules Stein, swathed in so many white veils she might have been going to her first communion; Peggy Diggins, wearing a flyaway, off-the-face affair which the boys appreciated.

When they stripped "Grapes of Wrath" of its bad language, it was still a good story and made a great picture. But "Tobacco Road" without the cuss words and bawdy incidents, leaves only brilliant characterization—and that's not enough for a motion picture.

Library of Congress Presents Exhibition Honoring Contemporary Poet

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

THE people are meeting Robinson Jeffers. Although the poet has left the city after a lecture delivered at the Congressional Library last week, the story of his life—historical and critical—was on exhibition in three cases at the library yesterday.

Jeffers' hands, as photographed by Johan Hagemeyer in 1932

He, whose life unrolls in the exhibit, is a man the people understand. They may not be sure what the poet says in some of his writings, but they understand the pattern of the life that is revealed. They understand because it describes a way of life many would like to follow.

There are the pictures of his ancestors. There is the lock of baby hair cut on September 18, 1889.

"I ALWAYS was told my hair was blond," Jeffers said when he viewed the exhibit last week. "That looks red to me."

There are photographs of the poet at all ages, pictures of the bust by Jo Davidson, a striking photograph of the poet's hands.

"Aren't those nice hands," a small girl said to her father as they looked at the exhibit yesterday.

They are strong hands of the sort the movies say should belong to a surgeon.

And the exhibit shows that Jeffers might have been a surgeon, for he studied medicine and received the highest grades in his class in physiology.

BUT he chose the uneven path of a poet, following the way he selected after selling his first verse to the Youth's Companion in 1904.

He went to a lonely stretch of coast—the Carmel coast of California—with his wife, Una. He built a tower of rocks jutting over the sea.

There are photographs of the completed tower and nearby home.

His twin sons, Garth and Donnan, come on the scene. Those who review the exhibit understand Jeffers better now. Here is a man, they say, who built a tower in which to be alone and here is a man whose wife is his constant companion and whose strong sons are constantly with him.

Suddenly in the mid-twenties acclaim comes to him. It is both critical and popular.

THERE are the exchanged letters with the late George Sterling, California's "poet laureate" who placed his crown on Jeffers and wrote a hero-worshipping study of him. There are articles by Lincoln Steffens and Joseph Auslander and numerous others. Time Magazine puts him on its cover.

On the front page of a San Francisco paper appeared: "Great New Poet, Jeffers, Arises at Carmel, Voices Real California Lure." Knowing Jeffers by this time as a retiring man, the observer believes he must have squirmed at this.

Finally there are his accumulated works and a picture of the poet, 54 now, hardened by the elements which play so important a role in his works, yet somehow softened.

A photograph of Jeffers made about 1910

The exhibit will continue through this week at the library.

IT'S possible to do a square dance in tattered overalls and with hayseed in one's hair, but such a rustic get-up is not necessary. Moreover, in the opinion of one expert, it reduces a natural, wholesome form of entertainment to a caricature.

The expert is Bascom Lamar Lunsford, "minstrel of the Appalachians," who has arrived from his native Asheville, N. C., as an apostle of the National Folk Festival opening May 1 at Constitution Hall.

"YES, I find Washington's interest in square dancing has increased since last year," Lunsford reports, "but folks still seem to think they have to get all costumed up. You know, in the mountains where I come from, people wear overalls to parties if they haven't anything else. But mostly they wear their Sunday-go-to-meeting clothes. They act natural, they get genuine fun out of it and that's how they've kept the dances alive so long. Folks here should just be themselves and consider square dancing as a means of entertainment rather than as an end in itself."

LUNSFORD will give a square dance demonstration tomorrow at the Pan-American Union.

D.C.'s Most Consistent Radio Listener

WASHINGTON'S most consistent radio listener is Scott W. Bone, junior administrative assistant at the Federal Trade Commission, who daily listens to the radio in his office to check on commercial advertising and, with the help of his staff of 19, reads 3,000 pages of radio script daily.

Bone might be called radioactive. In the World War he experimented with radio tubes for the Shipping Board; he has built several sets of his own, has three in his home and probably is in closer touch with radio continuity read over the Nation's 770 stations than anyone else.

HIS job is to investigate possibly false or misleading advertising read over the air or printed in magazines or newspapers. An employe of the FTC since 1929, he originated in 1934 the commission's system of sampling typical radio broadcasting, reading all network continuity and taking "spot samples" of local broadcasts.

Working under Director P. B. Morehouse, of the Radio and Periodical Division, Bone regularly checks on the continuity of 200 broadcasting stations, rotating the stations chosen to include all 770, and supervises examination of advertising in 461 magazines and 533 newspapers.

LAST month a special two-week test was made of 112 announcing periods on 12 radio stations. This resulted in 97 advertising statements being questioned, each to be followed by investigation by FTC experts.

Typical of cases uncovered recently by Bone's office and which resulted in "cease and desist" orders by the FTC were matrimonial clubs in New York and Colorado which made extravagant claims about their marriage-minded clients and a radio ad offering get-rich-fast mink breeding stock.

Scott W. Bone at the radio

BONE estimates that he and the staff read more than a million pages of radio continuity each year and investigate an average of 300 new advertisers monthly.

Several of his cases have resulted from listening to his radio at home, which he does constantly, "probably from force of habit." Bone, who was formerly a purchasing agent on the West Coast, is the son of Scott Bone, former editor of The Washington Post.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 2.—The strange thing about Joe McCarthy's prediction that the Yankees would win the 1941 pennant is that he never felt the need for any such prophecy in previous years. Even after the Yankees had won three straight in 1939 and were hailed as a super club, McCarthy had refused to venture the prediction that they would repeat.

POVICH

Can it be that the Yankee manager is attempting to inspire his ball players or is whistling during the dark uncertainty of the many experiments he has mapped out for the New York club? The evidence is that the Yankees are not the same solid club they were when, in former years. They came South hailed as invincibles.

The fact is that McCarthy is experimenting with more positions than any other manager in the league. There will be a new face at every spot in his infield if he hews to his present program. Babe Dahlgren is gone from first base, and the only other first baseman with the club is Johnny Sturm, of Kansas City. McCarthy is banking on two other Kansas City graduates, Jerry Priddy and Phil Rizzuto, to make good for him at shortstop. And he has shifted Joe Gordon, the best second baseman in the league, to third base.

Against these risks, the only insurance he has is Red Rolfe, who could go back to third base, thus releasing Gordon to play second, if Priddy is a failure. But if it is Rizzuto who does not meet big league specifications as a shortstop, then McCarthy must resort to Frankie Crosetti.

Rare have been the instances when two minor leaguers have made good in the same big league in field in the same manner. The old Yankee combination of Tony Lazzeri and Mark Koenig in 1926 was one striking example, but it was not until 14 years later that another such instance was produced. Lou Boudreau and Roy Mack turned the trick for the Indians in 1939-40.

Clark Griffith, the great wishful thinker, and confirmed Yankee hater is not conceding the pennant to the Yanks. In fact, it would please him to see the Yankees wind up on ignominious eighth. He sees no reason why the Yankees should be strong favorites to lead the league.

"Too many gambles," says Griffith. "Those young fellows who look so good in the minors may not look so good against big league pitching every day. I always did say that Bill Dickey was the man who was holding the Yanks together and look what happened last year when Dickey began to fade. There are teams in this league that ought to beat the Yankees."

It was a novel experience for McCarthy last year when his Yankees, who were in the habit of murdering the ball, ended up with the worst team batting average in the league. That is, no doubt, why he sanctioned the release of Babe Dahlgren, his fancy-fielding but weak hitting first baseman. The Yankees need more power.

But will they get it from Johnny Sturm, who is slated to be Dahlgren's successor? Sturm is as yet untried in the majors, as are Rizzuto and Priddy. As an unnamed sage cracked, "The big difference between the minors and majors is the good pitching you see most every day in the week." Broadway Commissioner Doyle has his own set of odds against minor leagues making good in the majors, and they are not flattering to the fellows who do come up.

The item that appears to be most heavily in favor of the Yankees is the fact that, as the worst hitting club in the league last year, they managed to finish only two games out of the lead. Barring sensational improvement by other clubs all along the line, a slight improvement by the Yanks might fetch them the pennant. But are the Yanks an improved ball club?

On paper they seem to be bringing more power into their line-up, but, unfortunately for the Yanks, this season's American League games will be played on sod, not on stationery. For the first time in years, the Yanks are not a "set" ball club. In former seasons it was always possible to name the Yankee line-up with no uncertainty whatsoever, but this year they are gambling on every position in the infield.

The risk the Yankees are taking might even extend to their catching department. Unless Bill Dickey does a magical come-back, which is doubtful at his age, the department may devolve on young Buddy Rosar. The latter is a tolerable sort of catcher, but at his best he will not give the club the protection both behind the bat and at the bat that the Yankees had been in the habit of receiving from Dickey for more than a decade.

There's always Joe DiMaggio, of course, but aside from the outfield that the Yankees can present is not exactly awesome. The league's pitchers showed no great terror of Charley Keller last season, and neither has George Selkirk been inspiring any great horror. Tommy Henrich, who, on occasion, has been a slugging outfielder, has been, on occasion, no great shucks at bat.

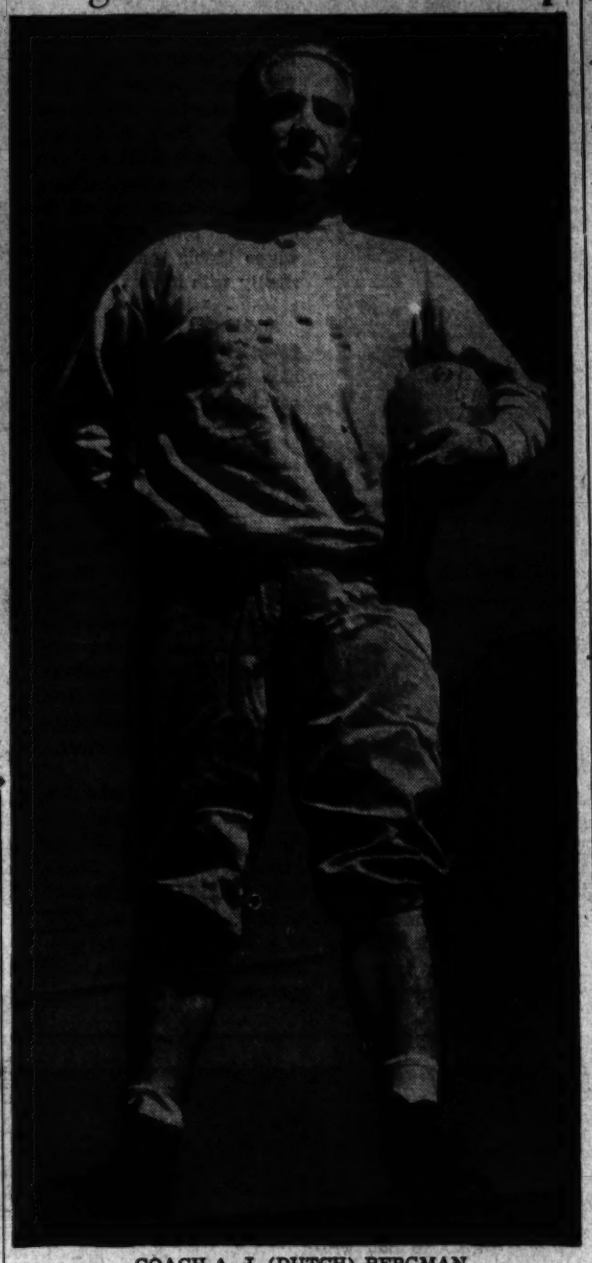

There will also be lacking this season, the awe of the Yankees that used to permeate the league and lick some of the clubs even as they took the field against New York. The four months the Yanks spent in the second division last season pretty thoroughly dissipated the fear they used to inspire. Maybe McCarthy was merely trying to buck up his Yanks with that pennant prediction.

Coaches 'Dutch' Bergman and 'Fod' Cotton Resign Posts in Athletic Shake-Up at C. U.

Two Veteran C. U. Coaches Who Figure in Athletic Shake-up

COACH FORREST (FOD) COTTON

COACH A. J. (DUTCH) BERGMAN

Action Is Prompted By Drastic Changes In Sports Set-Up

Surprise Move Seen Forerunner to Athletic De-Emphasis Program at University; School Officials Absent; No Future Plans Made Yet

By Jack Munhall

In moves believed to presage the early elimination of Catholic University as a power in any branch of intercollegiate athletics, A. J. (Dutch) Bergman, director of athletics and head football coach, and Forrest G. (Fod) Cotton, assistant grid coach and head mentor of basketball, last night announced separately their resignations, effective June 1, 1941. Their contracts expire on that date.

The announcements came within the space of an hour when a Post reporter called first Bergman and then Cotton to confirm rumors. No official statement could be obtained from Catholic University where it was reported that Bishop Joseph M. Corrigan, rector, and the Rev. James A. Magner, procurator, were out-of-town, and there was no one available for any official statement.

Bergman, in announcing his resignation, issued the following explanation:

"Because of the fact that a drastic change is to be made in the athletic policies of Catholic University, especially as it applies to major sports, I have submitted my resignation, effective June 1, 1941."

No Further Statement Made

Bergman declined to elaborate further on the trend of events that prompted his decision and also as to just when he tendered his resignation, saying such details should come from a university spokesman.

Cotton said he had given notice of his resignation about three weeks ago when informed by school officials that Catholic U. was beginning a "retrenchment."

Bergman, whose C. U. elevens won 60 games, lost 31 and tied four in 11 years, said he had nothing definite planned for the future.

Cotton, asked what were his future plans, declared:

"I haven't any. All I'm interested in is getting located somewhere, preferably around Washington because I love it here. In reply to a question as to whether he might go along with Bergman in any new position "Dutch" might obtain, Cotton said "I know nothing of Mr. Bergman's plans."

Though, as mentioned, there was no word from C. U., it is understood that Wayne Millner, Redskins' star who has coached the Cardinal ends for two years, also is out.

Implications of the double resignation, coupled with unimpeachable reports that C. U. plans to discontinue all athletic scholarships, are that the Cardinals will drop out of big-time competition in basketball, football, boxing and track, starting after the 1941-42 season. Schedules have been virtually completed for those sports next year.

For years the only scholarships given in any appreciable number by C. U. have been to football prospects who have then been recruited for basketball, boxing and track. In Cotton's ten years as basketball coach the only scholarship man on his squads was Bernie Leib, a product of Eastern High School, who developed into one of the best players in C. U. history.

Surprised at News

Both Dorsey Griffith, track coach, and Eddie LaFond, coach of boxing, were dumbfounded when informed of the news. Neither was able to say what it meant to them, except that the results probably would prove fatal to their sports.

LaFond said:

Many of my boxers are converted football players. If football scholarships are discontinued, it is easy to see what probably will happen."

Should Bergman and Cotton leave the vicinity for other positions the District would have lost two of its most capable sports leaders. Despite generally mediocre material, this combination produced fine football teams, winning an Orange Bowl bid in 1936 and one to the Sun Bowl four years later. The first Washington team ever to participate in a major bowl game, the 1936 C. U. eleven defeated University of Mississippi in a thriller never equaled in the Miami New Year's Day classic. The Cards played a scoreless tie in the Sun Bowl against Arizona State Teachers at Tempe.

Won 8 in 1931

In 1931, the first year the coaching talents of Bergman and Cotton were fused, the Cardinals compiled eight victories in nine games, finest record in the school's history. They duplicated that success the following year with the exception of a scoreless tie with Duquesne. C. U.'s grid tide ebbed in 1933 and 1934, but Bergman and Cotton popped up in 1935 with their victorious Orange Bowl outfit. In 1937 and 1938, C. U. won five of eight games. Last year it won four, lost three and tied one.

During this reign the Cards defeated such teams as Duequesne, Detroit, Mississippi, Manhattan, North Carolina State, South Caro-

Little, Demaret Bow In Four-Ball Upset

Dodson and Goggin Beat Favored Team, 2 and 1; Picard and Revolta Also Lose

By the Associated Press

Coral Gables, Fla., March 2.—National Open Champion Lawson Little and sharpshooting Jimmy Demaret bowed out of the $50,000 International Four-Ball Golf Tournament today—the victims of a 50-to-1 team—as golf's leading professionls showered the Miami Biltmore course with birdies in the 36-hole first round.

Leonard Dodson, of Springfield, Mo., who boasts he never lost a playoff, and Willie Goggin, of Miami—conceded virtually no chance in such a classy field—startled Little and Demaret with a burst of low scoring on the afternoon round and won, 2 and 1.

A spectacular comeback saved Clayton Heafner, of Linville, N. C., and Ed (Porky) Oliver, of Wilmington, Del. Three down after the morning 18, they came back to square the match, and win on an extra hole from Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass., and Harry Cooper, of Chicago.

Picard-Revolta Lose

The three-time winners—Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa., and Johnny Revolta, of Evanston, Ill., were eliminated by Johnny Bulla, of Chicago, and Lloyd Mangrum, of Oak Park, Ill., 6 and 5.

The 1940 winners—Billy Burke, of Cleveland, and Craig Wood, of Mamaroneck, N. Y.—had their hands full in a match with Denny Shute, of West Newton, Mass., and E. J. Harrison, of Chicago, but won, 2 up. Gene Sarazen, the farming man from Brookfield, Conn., and his partner, Little Ben Hogan, of Purchase, N. Y., defeated Johnny Farrell, of Hollywood Beach, Fla., and Willie MacFarlane, of Miami Shores, 1 up.

Biggest winning margin of the day was achieved by the well balanced duo of Sam Snead, of Hot Springs, Va., and Ralph Guldahl, former national champion from Chicago.

Scored 7 and 6 Victory

They triumphed, 7 and 6, over Victor Ghezzi, of Deal, N. J., and Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, N. Y.

The tournament lost its international complexion when the Argentine team of Eduardo Blasi and Martin Pose dropped out, one down, after throwing a scare into the perennial finalists — Paul Runyan, of White Plains, N. Y., and Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill.

Bobby Riggs, Miss Betz Win At Jacksonville

By the Associated Press

Jacksonville, Fla., Mar. 2.—Pauline Betz, of Rollins College, enhanced her prospects of winning the national women's tennis championship next summer by defeating Fellow Student Dorothy Bundy, 6—4, 11—9, in a rousing finale to the Southeastern Tournament here today.

Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, scored his third victory of the Florida winter circuit by taking a 6—4, 6—4, 6—4 victory from William Talbert, of Cincinnati, in the men's finals.

Miss Betz, who hails from Los Angeles, although playing under the colors of the Winter Park, Fla., College, appeared to have shaken off completely the effects of an injury suffered several weeks ago while playing basketball, and played a conservative, consistent game.

She is ranked behind only Helen Hull Jacobs among the Country's women players, and Miss Bundy is ranked next in order.

Riggs followed his usual tactics against Talbert, starting off as if to overwhelm him then slackening up when he found he had the situation under control. In the final set he allowed Talbert to take a 4-2 lead and then proceed to run out the set and match without the loss of another game.

Riggs, Talbert, Frankie Kovacs, of Oakland, Calif., Jack Kramer of East Los Angeles, Eddie Allso, of Rollins, Wayne Sabin, another Pacific Coast star, and others of the winter troupe go to Pensacola tomorrow for the final tournament of the Florida circuit.

Riggs and Kramer, co-holder of the men's double championship, teamed to defeat Talbert and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., 6—3, 6—4, in the doubles finals.

Dutch Bergman's Adventurous Career Spans Two Decades

The ear-splitting thrills of aerial warfare; the glamour of a circus trainer; the dusty dangers of mining, and the idolization due a great football player and highly admired coach. Take that mixture, toss in the experiences of professional sports writer and radio commentator, author, and lecturer, and you have the crazy-quilt career of "Dutch" Bergman.

From the time some 40 years ago that his lusty bawl heralded a newcomer into the home of the Peru, Ind., Bergman family until the present day, the "Dutch's" life has been one excitement after another.

Now a medium-built, silver-thatched gentleman with a politician's manner and an omnipresent cigar, Bergman still is as adventurous as the day when he first stepped within an inclosure to crack the whip over a snarling band of the "big cats."

Served in War

His eager, nervous mannerisms, staccatto speech and roving, piercing eyes suggest that the youngster who as a blocking back in football and as an ace with the United States Air Corps in the World War, was a fierce proposition for any opponent, still is a tough customer for any foe.

Before he was of prep school age, Bergman was testing his courage and agility against a pack of circus cats. Clyde Beatty, best known of all animal trainers, took pity on the kid who used to haunt the grounds and with a childish passion beg to emulate Beatty's crowd-stirring feats. Young Bergman finally got his opportunity, not before the cheering fans, but in the comparative privacy of the circus winter quarters, and he has never forgotten the thrill of cowering 800 pounds of tawny fury.

His ambitions of becoming a second Beatty ended at his family's insistence, Bergman entered Notre Dame Prep. From there he went on to the university. Few there are who are not familiar with Bergman's accomplishments as George Gipp's blocking back, but not generally known is the fact that "Dutch" also was a versatile track star. He ran the 100-yard dash and soared to great heights in the pole vault. Despite his 150 pounds, he played all sports with a zest and a daring that was to later stand him in good stead when next he was in competition—this time thousands of feet above the ground amid spitting machine-gun fire.

Graduated in '20

Came the war. And interrupting his college course, "Dutch" with thousands of other American youth went out to make the "world safe for democracy." For 14 months, as a reconoiter, fighter and bomber, Bergman blazed the skies over France, and when the bloody mess was over he was honorably discharged with the rank of captain. Back to Notre Dame he went and in 1920 he was graduated. In September of the same year, after six months of coal mining in West Virginia, his football coaching star began its ascendancy.

To New Mexico A. and M. College went Bergman. An immediate success, he continued on at University of Dayton, and then to University of Minnesota, where he picked up many a trick from the famous Clarence (Doc) Spears. So widely known became this young coach that in 1930 Catholic University offered him the job of director of athletics and on that date the sport of football was on its way up at Brookland.

But Bergman was not content merely to turn out successful football teams at C. U. Gradually he developed into one of Washington's leading citizens and a man whose word carried great weight in athletics.

To Bergman is given much of the credit for the divorce of local college boxing from the District of Columbia Boxing Commission, an act that required the approval of Congress.

Speaker of Note

Widespread is his reputation as an after-dinner speaker and human encyclopedia of sports, from a remarkable memory he draws facts and figures synonomous with the greatest happenings in two decades of sports.

Always he is a gracious host and father confessor to newspapermen. "Good copy" is what we call him. And so, if this is goodby to "Dutch" Bergman, then it's a sad farewell.

Nats' Rookie Pitching Seen As Futile

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

Orlando, Fla., March 2.—The brutal truth about Washington's home-bred crop of young rookie pitchers is that Manager Bucky Harris would feel no great sense of loss if they vanished in a body, without a trace.

The Nats are still one week distant from their first exhibition game but Harris has already reconciled himself to the futility of his young pitching hopefuls. Day by day he has seen them eliminate themselves from the Nats' 1941 plans. Not until they started trying to pitch from the rubber did Harris learn the full magnitude of their greenness.

Not a lad among them has exhibited any immediate promise of being a big leaguer, but two, perhaps three, will be retained by the club for lack of other pitching talent.

Harris Likes Anderson

From his general appraisal of the rookie pitching crop, Harris excepts one man. He is big Arnold Anderson, the only fellow in the lot who has been around in a league as high as Class A. Harris is a bit high on Anderson, who showed him a six-hit victory over the Browns late last season in the same series in which the Browns knocked Dutch Leonard and Sid Hudson out of the box.

Nor does Harris include Walter Masterson among the inept. Masterson has been around for three years and Harris is giving him special status. The group toward which Harris is scornful is the dozen from the Classes B, C and D clubs, who don't know how to stand on the rubber.

Harris indicated his complete disappointment with his young pitching talent when he declared today that "we're watching the waiver lists and will grab any pitcher who looks as if he might get somebody out. He doesn't have to be a star, but he'll still be an improvement over these bushers."

Thus the great pitching experiment, which last year produced Hudson for the Nats, has flopped this spring and the Nats are prepared to turn scavenger.

Convinced of Futility

Any resemblance to "Another Sid Hudson" that any of Harris' bush league pitching characters may have is purely impossible, the Nats' manager is convinced. But he will play out the string with them in camp here in the faint hope that he may be surprised.

Of late, Harris has been working more patiently with two lads, Joe

Rhees Takes Brookland Pin Tourney

A dark-horse entry from the Rosslyn Bowling Alleys, W. J. Rhees, won the Brookland near-star pin classic last night over a record field of 106 entries, 24 more than last year.

Rhees rolled a scratch total of 684 in the five-game event for bowlers with averages under 115. His set was good for first money of $75. He averaged nearly 135 sticks per game.

Mill Ulrich, 106-average pinman at Mount Rainier who won $75 top prize in the Sherbahn Sweepstakes concluded early Sunday morning, pocketed second money of $40 with a 650 set as he continued his sensational scoring for a medium-average bowler.

Third place and $30 in prize money went to Bill King, of the National Capital League, with a 654 set. John Shea, Rosslyn, posted 637 for fourth prize money of $25 while Bill Schotter, representing the host alleys, and Dick Masceri, of Silver Spring, tied for fifth place with 632 totals and divided $35.

Others in the money were Bill Duvall, Brookland, 631; Don Mathias, 625; E. J. Lechlider, 618, and Jim Smith, 618; Allan Tew, 617, and Earl McRaedy, 615.

High game out of the money, worth $5, went to J. Melton, Leesburg, Va., with 149, while three rolled 148 and received $3.50 from Manager Russ Diehl, Charles Hatten and Clyde Jenkins, of the host pin plant and John Auchter, R. R. B. Rhees, the new champion, rolled games of 120, 118, 132, 152 and 142.

Table Tennis Play On Tonight At Banneker

Paddlers seeking trophies in the inter-departmental table tennis tournament at Banneker Recreation Center will start swinging tonight in men's and women's singles and doubles.

Entries continued to pour in yesterday, the most outstanding being the Hayes brothers from the Treasury Department; John W. Taylor, John D. Fletcher, and O. T. Willis, from the State Department, and Percy Perry, from the Veterans Administration. Competition will get under way around 7:30 p. m. and trophies will be put up by The Washington Post.

Dallas, Tex., March 2 (AP).—Moreland's Place Sandy, owned and run by Dr. J. A. Ossman, of Jefferson City, Mo., won the blue ribbon in the final stakes at the Southern Beagle Club field trials today.

Jewels Beat Washington Brewers, 44-42

Special Dispatch to The Post

New York, March 2.—A sensational last-period rally that found them deadlocking the score twice fell short tonight and the Washington Brewers, of Washington, D. C., lost a fiercely fought American Basketball League game to the New York Jewels here, 44-42.

The Jewels entered the final period on the end of a 31-25 count and apparently destined to score handily, but the Brewers rallied down the stretch to tie it at 40-all and 42-42 before baskets by Gottlieb and Goldstein proved their undoing.

Phil Rabin, Washington's great scoring player, led the invaders' attack with 12 points while Moe Spahn scored 13 for the Jewels.

Fighter Hassett Talks! He's a Sleuth

Philadelphian Meets Billy Conn Thursday In New Uline Arena

By Al Hailey

Daniel Francis Hassett, private detective, yesterday took unto himself the task of clearing up the mystery of Irish Danny Hassett, student of fisticuffs, and came through with a mass of startling confessions:

1. "I am Fighter Hassett," said Sleuth Hassett.

2. "I am Sleuth Hassett," said Fighter Hassett.

3. "I am the one who is going to beat Billy Conn when I get him in the ring Thursday night," said Sleuth-Fighter Hassett, of Philadelphia.

This baffling array of confessions was wrung from the follower of Conyou Doyle's Sherlock Holmes and the Marquis de Queensbury yesterday in his hotel. He had just finished punching a pair of sparring partners in preparation for his 15-round battle with Conn in the new Uline $700,000 ice palace and was in a belligerent frame of mind.

"I don't see why there is so much concern over the fact that I am what they call an 'in and out' fighter," Sleuth Hassett mused to Fighter Hassett.

Hassett, who was technically knocked out by Bill Boyd in the tenth round last July in Griffith Stadium, hasn't had a fight since then. But he is supremely confident that fact makes no difference.

"Honestly, I don't have to fight," Danny said yesterday. "I was doing pretty good as a refrigerator salesman around Philadelphia until a few months ago when I accepted a job as a private detective under Capt. Jimmy Ryan. I'm still in the embryo stage as a detective, but I'm really doing all right.

"There's only one way to be a boxer, and that's to fight for the love of it. I've always managed to combine a good job with my boxing and consequently never have been a hungry fighter."

Dutch Bergman Not Considered For Boston U. Job

John P. Curley, director of athletics at Boston College, declared last night that he was unaware of "Dutch" Bergman's resignation from Catholic University and that Bergman had not been considered for the Boston College coaching job left vacant by Frank Leahy, who went to Notre Dame.

The Associated Press reported that Curley has called a meeting for today to decide upon Leahy's successor.

Here, Bergman stated that the Boston College job was not one on which he has had leads.

Eagles and Olympics Battle to 3-3 Deadlock in Overtime

Washington Tops League By 1 Point

11,000 See D. C. Ice Sextet in 7th Straight Game Without Loss; Les Colvin Big Star

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston Garden, March 2.—The Washington Eagles played the Boston Olympics to a 3-to-3 overtime tie here today to complete their seventh consecutive Eastern Amateur League match without defeat.

A crowd of 11,000 saw Washington fail its aid of duplicating last night's victory over the Olympics when Al Dumond tied the match for Boston at 2 to 2 with a goal late in the third period and each team scored once in the extra 10-minute session.

The tie, coincident with the Baltimore Orioles' double triumph over the New York Rovers, yesterday and last night, left the Eagles only one point ahead in the league race.

Colvin Saves the Day

In preserving its record of never having lost to the Olympics here, Washington was extended to the limit and only a second straight fine goal tending job by Les Colvin enabled the visitors to gain a deadlock. The little Colvin was credited with 35 saves, but even that impressive figure doesn't do him full justice.

Nip-and-tuck was the match, with the teams alternating at scoring goals. Boston's Ernie Guibard opened the point-making midway of the first period, taking the puck from Frankie Spain and slipping it past Colvin. The Eagles retaliated some four minutes later on a goal by Jack MacBeth, assisted by Norm Burns and Frank Mailley.

The second period was scoreless and featured by the great defensive work of Len Burrage and Colvin for Washington, and Goalie Vic Polich for Boston. After seven minutes of the third period Washington forged ahead with what for a long time appeared the winning goal. "Roxy" Rossignal tallied it on a sole dash after stealing the puck from Ty Andersen, star Boston defenseman.

Knipfel Penalized

But then Dumond, taking advantage of a fighting penalty which sent Ross Knipfel, of Washington, to the box for five minutes—not counting a ten-minute misconduct he received on the same play—sent the game into overtime.

Jack Walsh gave Boston a 3-2 lead in the first 24 seconds of the extra period, but "Porky" Pranschke, scoring his third goal in two days for the Eagles, knotted the count at 3:03. Hal Dewey and Paul Courteau assisted Pranschke to the match-tying counter.

The Eagles entrained for home immediately after the game to await a Tuesday night invasion by the Olympics.

| Washington. | Position. | Boston. |
|---|---|---|
| Colvin | Goal | Polich |
| Burrage | R.D. | Thompson |
| Knipfel | L.D. | Anderson |
| Courteau | Center | Spain |
| Dewey | R.W. | Guibord |
| Pranschke | L.W. | Sullivan |

Scores: Washington—Germann, Scherer, Assigned, McCurry, McBride, Mailley, Burns, MacBeth; Boston—Mee, Desrosiers, Chaisson, Jeremiah, Pryor, Dumond, Yourkewicz, Walsh.

Referee—Chadwick. Linesman—Babcock.

First period—1, Boston, Guibord (Thompson), 10:22; 2, Washington, MacBeth (Mailley, Burns), 16:48. Penalties—McBride (3 minutes, elbow check), Yourkewicz (3 minutes, high stick).

Second period—No scoring. Penalties—Knipfel (3 minutes, roughing), Walsh (3 minutes, slashing) and (10 minutes, misconduct), McBride (3 minutes, holding), Yourkewicz (3 minutes, tripping).

Third period—3, Washington, Assigned (unassisted), 7:28; 4, Boston, Dumond (Thompson, Chaisson), 14:32. Penalties—Mailley (3 minutes, tripping), Knipfel (3 minutes, fighting) and (10 minutes, misconduct, fighting), Walsh (3 minutes, high stick).

Overtime period—5, Boston, Walsh (Andersen), :24; 6, Washington—Pranschke (Dewey, Courteau), 3:03.

Orioles Twice Defeat Rovers

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—The Baltimore Orioles, who defeated the New York Rovers, 5 to 1, today in New York, brought the Rovers home with them and beat them again, 6 to 3, in an Eastern Amateur Hockey League contest here tonight.

The Orioles came from behind to win tonight's game, for they were trailing, 4 to 0, before the end of the first session. Roach and Laurant were Baltimore's scoring aces, Laurant taking three goals and Roach two, including the winning tally.

Bockwinkle, Cox Wrestle Thursday

Two wrestlers who would like "very much" to have a crack at The Angel, freakish grappler from France, yesterday were matched for a semiwindup bout on Thursday night's show at Turner's Arena.

They are Joe (Dynamit) Cox, of Kansas, and Warren (Flash) Bockwinkle.

The Angel is scheduled to meet Milo Steinborn, the reformed Memphis Blacksmith, in the headline battle, and according to Promoter Joe Turner challenges will be forthcoming from both Cox and Bockwinkle.

G.W., St. John's Meet Tonight At Riverside

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

One of the East's better court rivalries will be revived tonight at Riverside Stadium when George Washington and St. John's Universities stake their post-season claims against each other at 8:30 p. m.

The Brooklyn Redmen and the Colonials are both very much in the running for the National Collegiate Invitation Tournament to be played in Madison Square Garden this month. A defeat for either, however, will just about eliminate all chances for the tournament.

The Colonials are marching steadily towards what may be Coach Bill Reinhart's best year and have already compiled 17 victories against three defeats. The Johnnies, after a mediocre start have come through with 11 victories against four defeats.

The New Yorkers hold a sizeable margin in the nine-game series with the G Street club, six victories in nine games including a 47-40 triumph scored last year at Eastern High School. St. John's has played in the national invitation tournament for the last two years and late-season victories over G. W. have paved its way to the tournament.t

Former Ace Is Coach

Coach Loe Lapchick, center on The Original Celtics, brings one of the best drilled and conditioned teams in the East here tonight, led by Capt. Dutch Garfinakel and Jimmy White, one of Madison Square Garden's set-shot artists and the team's leading scorer. John Geilen, Ken Barnett and Bob Tough will also be in the starting lineup while Tommy Baer, the 5-foot 4-inch forward will see early action. Little Tommy played a great part in the G. W. defeat here last year.

The only doubtful starting position in the G. W. lineup will go to Charley Jones tonight as he pairs at forward with Matt Zunic, the District and the team's leading scorer. Joe Comer will start at center and Bobby Gilham and Lou Veltri, guards.

Zunic has scored 229 points in 20 games, for an average of nearly 11 points per game. Comer is next with 169 points with Eddie Amendola third with 125. Amendola will probably play most of the game in a sub's role.

G. W. has outscored its opponents, 47-35, over the season with a total of 941 points to 719 for the opposition.

Everett Morris, New York Herald Tribune basketball expert who is on the committee to pick the teams for the postseason mythical championship tournament in New York, said yesterday that both George Washington and Georgetown are in the running for a bid to the event, but first the Colonials must tacke a good St. John's team. At the same time, it was intimated that Rhode Island

Runs, Hits & Errors

With SHIRLEY POVICH

(All communications to this department should be addressed to Shirley Povich, Angebilt Hotel, Orlando, Fla.)

Orlando, Fla. March 3.—From Richmond, Va., comes a demand for more consideration for Rookie Jack Sanford in the Nats' first-base plans for 1941. Charles G. Moran, who described himself as "a follower of the Nats since 1920" writes:

"If Bucky Harris had seen Sanford play ball in the Piedmont League last season, he'd know that the boy is just about ready for the big leagues. But from all indications, Harris has turned over the first base job to George Archie and has made up his mind that Sanford will not do.

"Harris and Washington fans got the wrong impression of Sanford when they saw him in action with Washington last fall. I saw him play several games for Washington and he wasn't the same Sanford we saw down here. It was easy to see that he was worn down from the long season in the Piedmont League. He was tired. It showed in his batting swing, which didn't resemble the batting stroke that gave him a .360 average in the Piedmont League.

"He showed Washington fans that he could field, and down here we know he can hit, even big league pitching. It's my guess that when all of the first basemen have had their fling at the job in the Washington training camp, that Sanford, not Archie, will be on the bag when the season opens."

COMMENT—Sanford's tryout with the Nats late last season could be called "the Strange Case of Jack Sanford." He was supposed to be a fierce hitter and not much of a fielder. He could scarcely buy a base hit, but his fielding was superb. At bat, the big fellow didn't look as if he could hit .300 in any league, despite his high average in the Piedmont. But it was evident that he was not taking a good cut at the ball, and that he was weary from the Piedmont League season. In fact, his father, a Baptist minister and ball player before him, urged Sanford not to take last fall's tryout with the Nats, pointing out that he was not at his best. Bucky Harris, however, is making due allowances for the big fellow's poro showing and has not dismissed him from his first-base calculations. He does think that Sanford is at least another year away from the majors.

Dizzy Spells Hit Billy Jurges Again; Out of Line-up

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 2.—Billy Jurges, the shortstop who is the key to the success of the New York Giants in the National League this year, suffered a return of dizziness today and did not participate in his club's exhibition game with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

JURGES

The veteran infielder, who was beaned accidentally by Bucky Walters last June and had to remain out of action for the remainder of the season because of severe headaches, had played in the first two games of the exhibition series with no ill effects.

But today he stooped over to pick up a towel at his hotel and became dizzy.

Before he went South for training recently, Jurges said he might have to undergo an operation to prevent the recurrent spells. He said he already was 60 per cent deaf in his left ear and that the operation, if necessary, would make him totally deaf on that side.

Regal, D. & H. Fives Victors

Overcoming a 19-14 halftime lead, Regal Clothiers basketball club last night forged ahead in a neck-and-neck second half race to nose out Adam Hats, 45-43, in the first game of the Heurich League championship playoff at Heurich gymnasium.

The game developed into a three-way scoring duel between Hats' M. Heddings, with 15 points, and Regal's Viana and Custer, who shot 28 points between them.

In the preliminary, Delaware & Hudson disposed of the Arlington Macabees easily, 52 to 39. The second game of the championship playoff will be next Sunday at Heurich.

Thompson Makes Hockey Debut Here

Walter Thompson, newly acquired wingman of the Washington Eagles, arrived here yesterday after a brief tussle with Canadian border officials who delayed him three days, and will make his debut tomorrow night when the Eagles meet the Boston Olympics at Riverside Stadium.

Thompson, one of the mainstays of the Port Colborne Sailors of the Senior Ontario Hockey Association, was recommended to Coach Redvers Mackenzie by Gordon Lee, goalie who played last year with the Eagles and now is with Port Colborne. Thompson also bears the stamp of approval of Jim McKelvie, Port Colborne center, who would have been signed by the Eagles save for an injury recently.

To Be Tried at Center

The newest Eagle, who is 23 years old and weighs 155 pounds, will be tried at center, though he ordinarily is a wing, because Mackenzie believes Washington needs strengthening at that position. Though Norm Burns, the Eagle's leading center, is one of the outstanding scorers of the Eastern League, he does not fit Mackenzie's idea of an ideal centerman.

Thompson brings the Eagles' squad to 16 players, two over the number of players who are allowed to dress for a match, but the Washington management has declared it plans no reduction. Mike Germann, veteran wing who was placed on probation at the time that defense Johnny McTeer was released, will be kept.

Meet Olympics Tomorrow

Beaten only four times this season on their home ice, the Eagles will be meeting one of their two nemeses tomorrow when they tackle the Olympics. Although Boston has been unable to beat Washington up in the Beantown, it has been a tough proposition for the Eagles here at Riverside. Of the four games, Washington has lost locally one was to Boston, which also has never failed to give Washington's team an interesting argument.

Nats' Rookie Parade

at Orlando

No. 7, HARDIN CATHEY, Jr., Pitcher

He's the most expensive rookie pitcher of the crop who came up to the Nats this spring. He cost the Washington Club $5,000 despite the fact that the only record he owned was a year's experience in the Class D Georgia-Florida League, with the Thomasville, Ga. Club.

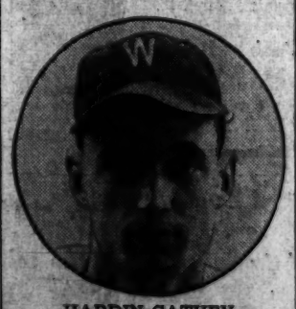

He was the property of Chattanooga when the Nats bought him on the recommendation of Joe Engel, Chattanooga owner. One reason the Nats went high for him was the fact that the $5,000 they gave the Chattanooga Club was promptly repaid to Washington, which owns a hefty mortgage on the Chattanooga franchise.

At Thomasville, last season, he won 19 games and lost only eight. He's a big, 190-pounder, 21 years old, and he's a right-hander despite the official Washington roster which labels him as a southpaw. He's supposed to have a fast ball.

He's a hick. He's a shirt-open-at-the-throat guy who thinks a necktie is an unnecessary thrill. He shuffles along at a gait that he must certainly have learned walking behind a plow. But all these things Manager Bucky Harris is willing to forgive if the rather good looking, black-haired young giant can pitch a little bit.

He's powerful. He got those big shoulders and strong hands from slinging 120-pound milk cans around on his folks' dairy farm in a whistle-stop called Burns, Tenn. He strikes you as being able to pitch all day, or as long as any manager is constrained to leave him in the box.

He's plenty green and doesn't know how to behave on the rubber, but the Nats' bosses are willing to string along with him on the suspicion that he can truly zoom that last ball across the plate. He struck out 176 batters at Thomasville last season. Dale Alexander, the old ex-batting champion of the American League, who is the Thomasville manager, thinks he has a big league future.

Venske and Blozis Added To Meets Here Next Week

Two big name track stars officially entered the two track meets scheduled here next week at Uline Arena, the eighth annual Catholic U. indoor games next Monday, March 10, and the Washington A. A. meet Saturday, March 15.

C. U. officials received the signed entry blank of the great miler, Gene Venzke, yesterday to further boost the field for the Killion Memorial Mile.

Washington A. A. officials were assured of the appearance of Georgetown's shot put sensation, Al Blozis, who bettered his own world indoor record Saturday night in Madison Square Garden with a toss of 56 feet 6 inches.

Robert Acorn, president of the local track group, is also making an effort to bring Blozis under the fold of the Washington A. A. for competition after he leaves Georgetown in June, 1941.

Venske won the mile in the C. U. games last year, beating Glenn Cunningham by a dozen laps. He has run more than 120 mile races in his career for the remarkable average time of 4 minutes and 18 seconds. John Munski will be one of his opponents while others are expected to send in entries this week.

Giants Again Lose, 6 to 2, To Dodgers

New York Limited To 6 Hits; Young Gets Homer; Reiser Connects for Brooklyn

By the Associated Press

Havana, March 2.—The Brooklyn Dodgers completed a sweep of their three-game series with the New York Giants by wrapping up a 6-to-2 victory today in the six-hit pitching of Luke Hamlin, Steve Rachunok and Wesley Flowers.

The Giants were saved from a shutout when Babe Young hit a two-run homer in the second.

Pete Reiser opened the Brooklyn bombing with a home run with one on against Carl Hubbell in the first inning. The Dodgers collected three more runs in the third and one in the sixth off Bill Lohrman. After that Ace Adams and Bump Hadley pitched shutout ball.

Brooklyn again was faultless afield, but the Giants committed four errors.

Novikoff Signs Cub Pact

Owen Comes to Terms

Havana, March 2 (AP).—Catcher Mickey Owen, who had been a long-distance holdout against the Brooklyn Dodgers, came to terms today after a 15-minute consultation with President Larry MacPhail, who was believed to have compromised on a bonus contract.

Owen wanted $10,000 and possibly more, but it was understood he signed for a base pay of about $8,000 with an arrangement that would give him the amount he wanted provided he became the Dodgers' regular catcher and appeared in 100 games.

Heffner, Hoag in Fold

San Antonio, Tex., March 2 (AP).—The signing of Don Heffner and Myril Hoag over the weekend reduced the St. Louis Browns' holdout ranks to one—Roy Cullenbine, who is expected in camp tomorrow.

Second Baseman Heffner came to terms after a two-hour conference with club officials Saturday night. Outfielder Hoag signed today and took part in a long workout.

Cards in Long Drill

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 2 (AP).—The Cardinals had far more than the customary amount of batting practice here today.

In addition to their lengthy morning and afternoon batting drills on the diamond, almost all of the 38 players in camp took turns in the batting cage against the new electric pitching machine.

A "ballometer" attached to the machine showed they swung at approximately 1,700 balls.

McNair Is Injured

Lakeland, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Detroit's champion Tigers opened their spring training here today and within two hours had acquired their first casualty when Eric (Boob) McNair, candidate for shortstop, turned an ankle in a leap for a throw.

McNair made his own way to the clubhouse and his injury was not believed serious. However, Manager Del Baker ordered on X-ray. McNair, acquired on waivers this winter from the Chicago White Sox, is battling with the Veteran Dick Bartell and Frankie Croucher for the shortstop job.

Bees in Hitting Drill

San Antonio, Tex., Mar 2 (AP).—Veterans Max West, Chet Ross and Sibby Sisti unlimbered their heavy artillery today as Manager Casey Stengel sent his Boston Bees through their initial batting and fielding drill of the training season.

Tribe Regulars Win

Fort Myers, Fla., March 2 (AP).—The Indians' regulars, aided by Clarence Campbell's home run, took the first six-inning practice game of the training season today from the yannigans, 3 to 0.

Bill Zuber and Joe Krakauskas collaborated on a two-hit performance for the regulars. For the yannigans, Marvin Center allowed seven hits in three innings, after which Harry Eisenstat stopped the regulars cold. Lou Boudreau had a double and a single in three times at bat.

Elks Club Wins Bowling Match

The team match, with three teams representing each organization, was close with the Elks winning with a 4,906 coun' to 4,860 for Almas Temple. Almas Temple, No. I, produced individual stars in Tom Courtney with 388 and Ben Milan, 382. Ed Mulvey had 391, best score among the Elks' bowlers.

Lewis Rose and Ben Milam rolled consistent sets in beating George Garrison and Bill Lewis in doubles, despite a 360 by Garrison.

The boys were a little off form in singles, Tom Courtney winning with 333 to 314 for Roger King. A return match will be rolled March 29 on New Recreation Alleys.

Auction Postponed

La Plata, Md., March 2.—The livestock auction at La Plata scheduled to have opened for business yesterday, was called off because of the weather. The market will open March 8.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, March 2.—As a dealer in generalities, we have always been impressed by what we believed was the fact that great horses have great names. You never have heard of a nag named Nellie's Bloomers, or Fishface, winning anything important. But you do hear of the superbly named Man o' Wars, Cavalcades, Top Flights, War Admirals, etc., etc.

CONSIDINE

But, we guess, it is really the horse that makes the name great. Bimelech, for instance, isn't the smoothest name that ever rolled off a human tongue. It isn't even a word. It is a rupture of Abimelech—plumb out of the Bible—and the reason Col. Bradley, the pious old gambler, named his horse that way was because he (Bradley) had an old friend whose nickname was Abimelech. However, all Bradley horses begin with B (Bubbling Over, Burgoo King, Broker's Tip, Bagganbaggage, Brooklyn, etc.) hence: Bimelech.

Omaha has a lot of cacophony in it, as a word, but he was a lot of horse. Exterminator also has been suggested as a great name for a great horse. But, by its lonesome, it might suggest a gent whose sorry trade in life was the eradication of the fearsome small things which undermine a man's home.

We got a letter from J. C. Milam the other day, about Exterminator. Milam bought the wonderful old nag as a yearling for $1,500, at the Saratoga yearling sales. The yearling was known only by a number, of course. Milam liked his looks—one of the few who ever did—and asked Mrs. Milam to think up a good name for a horse which "was going to run every other horse into the ground." Hence: Exterminator."

There are some aptly-named colts and fillies coming along now, including one which surprises us a little: Wait For Baby, whose dam was Easy Come. Then there is a filly named Appeasement, whose sire was Peace Chance and whose dam was Refine. She hasn't done much, which may be an omen.

Bold Irishman is a fine, well-named colt, by Sir Gallahad III out of Erin. Bold Irishman won four races as a 2-year-old, including the Pimlico Futurity, and should do well as a 3-year-old in the Derby, Preakness, Belmont, etc.

Challedon doesn't mean anything, but it fulfills a demand on the part of his owner, William Brann, that the Brann horses be euphoniously named. Challedon is, as you probably know, by Challenger II, out of Laura Gal. Damaged Goods, the fine filly by Jacopo out of Perjury, got her name because as a baby she was caught in a stable fire and had her rump scorched. She won the Acorn and Coaching Club Oaks at Belmont.

Eight Thirty derived its name from its ma, Dinner Time. Pop was Pilate. The horse ran the fastest mile and a quarter turned in last year and won the Suburban. But it is brittle. Hash (by Questionnaire out of Delicacy) has a new full brother equally appropriately named Monday Lunch. Monday Lunch won the Champagne Stakes, of all things, at Belmont last October.

Hash and Monday Lunch were named by Mrs. Payne Whitney, who is the recognized champ at figuring out names which have a breeding derivative. It is said that the much-venerated mistress of the Greentree Stable holds a special house party about this time each year. Hands out typewritten sheets bearing all breeding information about the yet-unnamed Whitney yearlings, and asks for aid.

Our Boots, winner of the Belmont Futurity, was believed to be named after his dam, Maid of Arches. But he wasn't. He was named for the pet bulldog of the owner's daughter, but, by coincidence, Our Boots' pappy is Bull Dog.

As for Seabiscuit, the record money-earner, he is, of course, by Hard Tack out of Swing On. Nicely named, but would the name have meant much unless it was applied to that kind of horse? That might go for Twenty Grand, too, though we always had an idea that that was a simply swell name.

The airplane man, Boeing, has horses named Air Speed, and Iron Mike, which is a trade name for an automatic pilot. Al Vanderbilt's New World is a splendidly named colt, for he is by Discovery. But Vanderbilt wasted another good name on New World's full brother, the 2-year-old New Horizon, who has developed a form of paralysis and has been given to a research institution for study. Whirlaway, the Kentucky Derby's winter-book favorite, is by Imp. Bienheim II out of Dust Whirl, which was by Sweep.

The registration department of the Jockey Club closed its books on new names for this season's 2-year-olds, last Friday. Any owner who failed to name his new plug must now pay a fine of $5. If any owner wishes to change the name of a horse already registered, the charge is $100. Fred Klees, of the Jockey Club, who has named hundreds of thoroughbreds, because their owners couldn't decide on a name, told us recently that he had been flooded by applications for martial names. Klees also turned down the application of a well-known horseman who wanted to name his new colt either the Bishop or M'Lord. Bad taste, Klees grumped.

Sacred Heart Five Beaten

Baltimore's Parochial League Champions, St. Martin's, evened the series with the District champions, Sacred Heart, yesterday in the Baltimore A. C. gym, beating the local team, 15-14. The third and deciding game of the series will be played next Sunday at Gonzaga gym.

Blessed Sacrament, Baltimore's second-place winners, won the series from St. Matthew's, of this city, 16-10, for two straight victories.

Soose and Vigh Battle Friday

New York, March 2 (INS).—Billy Soose, Farrell, Pa., and Ernie Vigh, Newburgh, N. Y., began putting final touches on their training for a return bout Friday at Madison Square Garden. The winner, according to Promoter Mike Jacobs, will get a shot at Middleweight Champion Ken Overlin, probably in May. In their last duel, Soose won a hair-line decision.

Horses Gathering at Bowie for Opening of Maryland Season

Nominations For 4 Stakes Close Mar. 15

Stalls Made Ready For Florida Horses; Eighth Race Makes Changes in Books

With 225 horses already bedded down at Bowie, Dick Pending, track superintendent, is prepared to receive the vanguard from Hialeah during the Ides of March, Joseph A. Farrell, general manager, announced today, for the opening of the eastern racing season on April 1. Stables which did not race during the winter also will be shipping to the Prince George's county plant.

Applications for stalls have been numerous, and before the first bugle blows all will have been occupied, because the turfmen are anxious to compete for the first spring purses in Maryland worth $1,200. Several owners that ordinarily would not race at Bowie will be present instead of waiting for Havre de Grace to open.

With the closing of nominations for the three $5,000 stakes and the $2,500 Bowie Kindergarten on March 15, that date also will mark the beginning of the schooling of horses, particularly the green 2-year-olds. Schooling periods will be held each morning from the Bahr gate, which will be brought from under cover and given a general overhauling before Jim Milton, or one of his assistant starters, breaks them out of the "V" shape compartments.

New Entrance

Only one major improvement has been made, because no other was necessary, since the close of the fall season. The jockeys will go to the paddock by a new route. They will walk through the administration building and will have only a dozen or 15 feet to walk to the paddock entrance after leaving it. Heretofore they have left from the scale room and it was necessary for them to pass between a mass of fans before entering the paddock. Hero worshippers won't have a chance to come in close contact with the riders in the future before the events are run.

Considerable comment has been expressed since Manager Farrell has permission by the Maryland Racing Commission to run eight races during the spring meet. Practically all of it has been in favor of the additional event. Between 100 and 132 horses will have a chance to perform under the new rule, and the State will derive more revenue. Devotees of steeplechasing have been inclined to believe that it will hurt thir sport, but such is not the case.

Jumps at Pimlico

Matt L. Daiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey Club, is authority for the assertion that the usual daily jumping event will be scheduled by his organization, just the same as in the past. If the obstacle race cannot be filled that is a different story and an extra flat race will be scheduled. Whether the pillars of the cross country sport can muster sufficient leppers to jump daily remains to be seen.

There is no doubt, it is pointed out, that steeplechasing has taken a back seat in the last decade. Stakes have been called off at Laurel Park and last fall instead of running 25 events only 19 were held. It is a coincidence that no jumping races were held on Saturdays at Laurel.

Bowie never had a steeplechase course because of opening and closing the Maryland turf season. The leapers could not be gotten ready for the spring and not many would have been in condition to run in the fall, if Bowie would have been a course. Havre de Grace is an example. That track catered to the sport, but had to give it up for the simple reason the horses were not ready to run by mid-April and then in the fall competition in New York was too keen.

Change in Books

So far as known Bowie gained another "first" in racing. Condition books were sent to Hialeah and Santa Anita by airmail. That was necessary because the book was held up several days in printing due to Manager Farrell obtaining consent of the Maryland Racing Commissoin to hold eight races. Otherwise the books would have been forwarded by the usual channels.

One Maryland stable that never raced at Bowie in the spring has engaged stalls for six horses. The other day Robert J. Walden, master of Bowling Brook Farm, Carroll County, and at one time a big owner of Maryland Jockey Club stock, notified Manager Farrell that he would send down his representatives. Walden has raced many fine stake horses on all Eastern tracks for 50 years, more or less.

The lowest round of the day was the 62—on a par 71 course—carded by Dodson and Goggin in the afternoon. They were out in 30—five under par.

Jimmy Thomson Wins Golf Driving Contest

Coral Gables, Fla., March 2 (AP).—Jimmy Thomson, of Chicopee, Mass., who had not lost a golf driving contest this season, today won a $100 first prize in the Miami Biltmore competition with a 275-yard drive.

Clayton Heafner, Linville, N. C., was second with a 273-yard drive and Sammy Snead, Hot Springs, Va., third with 272.

Dick Chapman, national Amateur champion from New York, drove 200 yards and Ben Bernie, orchestra leader, hit one a mere 167 yards in the contest.

Bill Ackerman On Fishing

Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson in reporting to the Secretary of Interior said; "Conservation of wildlife is one way of making a country worth living in . . . a first essential of inspiring zealous defense . . . success achieved thus far in restoring and conserving wildlife has made it easier for the United States to undertake an intensive National defense program."

ACKERMAN

We are still woefully far behind in conservation practices though, if we stop to consider the continued pollution of our waters, soil erosion and clean farming.

As bad as our industrial pollution is in our life-filled waters, Dr. Hugh Bennett, chief of the Soil Conservation Service says: "The silt that has washed off American farms in recent years—taking the Nation as a whole—has done more damage to aquatic life than the pollution from factories.

The answer to soil erosion is ground cover. It is the answer to a natural increase in our wildlife as well. Interest in these through education might possibly result in finally shaming the stream polluter into correcting his wasteful habits.

The National Wildlife Federation says: "The average citizen is anxious to help in any way he can the work of conservation—recognizing the value of education in learning how to make his bit help most. The issuance during 1941 of "My Land and Your Land" by the federation was fitted to that particular need . . . in four booklets, or educational units, composed of "Would You Have Liked to Have Lived When," "Raindrops and Muddy Waters," "Plants and Animals Live Together," and "Nature's Bank—The Soil" . . . for the use of pupils in grade schools . . . where conservation education should start.

Another new book—a novel on the Florida Key country by Theodore Pratt, with plenty of fishing action. In fact the story is built around a tarpon, a well-hooked tarpon—and because it is, changes the lives of the characters in "Mercy Island."

Dennis M. Rogers and Linden C. Prato, of General Accounting, are back from a sailfishing binge at Stuart on the St. Lucie. They are just as full of praise of this little Florida East Coast town that has been the 1941 center of sailfishing, as the many other local anglers who have fished there this winter.

Anyone who can release their first sail is pretty good, but that is just how Linden Prato disposed of his fish measuring 7 feet 6 inches. Of the six caught by Rogers, only one was released, but for the reason that five were injured so badly it was useless to return them.

Delhuds Play Hats Tonight

Delaware & Hudson's strong quintet will meet its toughest opponent of the current District A. A. U. court championships tonight when it battles the undefeated Adam Hats five in the semifinal round of the unlimited class at Heurich gymnasium. This game, the last on the night's program is listed for 10 o'clock.

Breezing through the tournament with little difficulty thus far, both teams can show great records, and the battle will decide which one will take on the Regal Clothiers in the first round. Adam Hats easily upset the fast-moving Silent Sphinx five, of Gallaudet College, 60-46, Saturday night.

Other Games Listed

In other games listed for tonight, the FBI girls will meet the Clan A. C. Agriculture's strong girls team, and Garvins Grill will battle it out with the Washington Boys Club Central branch. The latter is a 145 pound meeting.

Winners of the tournament will be sent to Roanoke to compete in the South Atlantic championships, Chairman Joe Bertolini announced. The winner of this tournament, which opens March 9, will be sent to the National Finals at Denver, opening March 18.

Desires Ball Players

The Atchison-Keller unlimited baseball team desires players for the coming season, preferable infielders. Players interested should call Bill Richards at Lincoln 2891-W, after 8 p. m.

Army Elects White Basketball Captain

Baltimore, March 2 (AP).—Cadet E. J. White, of Falls City, Nebr., was elected captain of the Army basketbal team for next year, Coach Val (Dutch) Lentz announced today. Lentz, who stayed here following the Army-Navy game at Annapolis yesterday, said the team held the election today en route to West Point, and telegraphed him the result.

Bill Bennings

At The Post

Selections at Tropical Park

Dear Al: I'm just going to mention the fact that I had the Circle M. Ranch entry of Big Pebble and Get Off on top in the $50,000 Widener, and I'm not going to do a lot of blowing, like you anticipated. Regarding the Widener, it is tough that Bimelech had to be beaten off when Col. E. R. Bradley wanted him to win so badly. The hose that won was a Bradley Stable castoff. Jockey George Seabo, who rode Big Pebble to the great victory, is the same rider who was virtually kicked off Challedon after the Brann star was baten one day. Out on the West Coast, C. S. Howard probably is a much disappointed man because Mioland met defeat at the hands of Bay View. One thing is certain, he had little reason to believe that Bay View would defeat his horse. The son of Sweep All had never been over a distance of ground, having operated only in sprints. However, Bay View had shown some signs of being a horse that "would go on," Howard just got caught again by the Jockey Nick Wall jinx. The little rider certainly has rubbed it in on Howard. Wall was aboard Esposa when the mare surprised by whipping Seabiscuit in Maryland. Wall rode Stagehand when the Maxwell Howard 3-year-old nosed Seabiscuit out of a $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap. It was the same boy who kicked Bay View along in front last Saturday and then kept him going to the end. It might be a good idea for Howard to buy Wall's contract instead of another $15,000 yearling. The boy probably would prove the best horse in his barn. Mioland, which suffered leg trouble last year, hardly is the same horse he was a year ago. However, it must be remembered that Mioland was giving away gobs of weight over a muddy track. Challedon just can't be the old Challedon. He seems to have lost his touch without Trainer Lou Schaefer. I wonder if what the little bird told me about Preston Burch taking over the conditioning of the Brann horses will come true. The way Brother Brann has been going it seems about time for him to make another channge. Four weeks to Bowie. BILL.

First race—SAMPLER is a fair sort of juvenile and should be a keen factor in this field. Inside post positions at this track are more favorable than at Hialeah and I'm going to string along. IMPLICIT should do a lot of running and deserves a forward position. BROWN DANCER for the show end.

Second race—LITTLE RHODY could be the right one in this sprint event. Has the speed and would be the winner with strong handling. SURE CLOUD has speed and is dangerous. IMPERIAL JAYNE for the minor award.

Third race—BOILED SHIRT appears to have found the right spot in this field. Meade will do the riding and the combination looks best. FETTACAIRN is good now and belongs to these. TAMIL for the other cash position.

Fourth race—DOUBLE B. is a lover of the Tropical track and probably will have a long price tag. I may be taking a shot at the moon, but I believe this one has a good chance. VALEVICTORIAN and RANGE DUST are the figure horses and will battle it out if I'm overestimating the ability of the top one.

Fifth race—ESPINO GOLD turned the trick for us at the other track. Sharp as hands make horses and I see no reason for mistakes. BRIGHT TRACE is tossed in here with a feature and promises to do a lot of running. MAR LE could make a money appearance.

Sixth race—BANKER JIM could be the right one at a good price in this field. OUR FLORENCE jogged ahead of her company at the other course and is a dangerous contender off that effort. LLANERO seems to have something on the others.

Seventh race—HANDIBOY likes the route and shapes up well among these. I'm going to string along. CHARLOTTE GIRL and NIGHTLAND have speed and should be keen factors.

Eighth race—BRIGHT VICTORY scored for us last Saturday at Hialeah and promises to make it two in three days if sent back for this. NILON is the one I have been trying to root home. HONEY CHILE is a money probability.

Best bet—BOILED SHIRT.

Judy Johnson Rides 'James A.' In Saturday's Redland Bowl

Miss Judy Johnson, rider, trainer and horsewoman extraordinary, will have the mount on Play Pal, owned by T. T. Mott, in the annual running of the Redland Bowl, feature race of the Redland Hunt's point-to-point races scheduled to open the outdoor horse season hereabouts next Saturday. Play Pal is the $10,000 horse that caused such a big controversy in racing circles when, under the name of James A., he won among other races a stake event at Delaware Park. Mott, who is master of fox hounds at Redland, acquired Play Pal after the stake victory and since has been unable to race him on the major tracks. Play Pal, or James A., has developed into a jumper of class and may be the favorite in the competition to be staged in Montgomery County.

The Mott gelding will have to be at his best, however, for Longitude, winner last year under the clever handling of Jerry Webb, will be back to defend his honors. Just who will ride Longitude has not been announced but the veteran is reported to be in excellent shape. Among others, Hazel Welsh is expected to hold a strong hand with Windsor Boy.

Mrs. Frank McSherry, who was injured last year, will return to the saddle in the Terpenning Cup event, the pair race in which she was hurt when her mount stumbled and fell.

As usual, the course for the point-to-point race will not be named until two days before the program. Mott has announced that the entire course will be within sight of the spectators. Last year, the races drew a crowd upwards of 5,000.

In addition to the Terpenning Cup and Redland Bowl, there will be the heavyweight race and the Gap Hunters race. The last named event is for non-thoroughbred horses.

Horse Show Dates Listed

Dates for two outstanding horse shows to follow the Washington Horse Show scheduled May 16, 17, 18 at Meadowbrook Club just off the East-West Highway, were announced yesterday by Miss Deborah G. Rood, Wilmington socialite and managing director.

Miss Rood announced that the Wilmington Horse Show, of which she is secretary, will be held on May 22, 23, 24, and that the Devon (Pa.) classic would be staged from May 26 through May 31.

It was also made known by Miss Rood that the prize lists, now being whipped into shape and to be ready for distribution in about ten days, will be sent out together for both the Washington and Wilmington shows. Some 50 events have been around 1,000 entries are expected planed in various classes, and for the show at Meadowbrook.

The Washington Horse Show officially inaugurates the spring season for this circuit, and due to the cancellation of a number of New York and New Jersey shows, the Meadowbrook classic is due to have its greatest entry in history, Miss Rood said.

Sealey Stars As Bruins Beat Dodgers, 48-28

"Tom" Sealey, crashing baskets from all angles, and guarding superbly, was the individual star of the contest, piling up 17 points. Schneider, Dodgers' center, who stole the ball from Soupy Campbell's dribble to push through the winning basket in their first encounter, was held safe yesterday by "Tarzan". Cooper.

The Dodgers, who trailed at the half, when the count stood 26-20, though playing desperately, could add but eight points in the final 20 minutes, as the Bruins had worked out a defense system that was well-nigh impregnable.

Bergman, Cotton Resign

lina, Miami, DePaul, Loyola of the South, Tulsa and St. Anselm.

Bergman and Cotton both are former Notre Dame football All-Americans. Bergman, now in his early forties, was born in Peru, Ind., and attended Notre Dame Prep before going to Notre Dame to win national publicity as George Gipp's blocking back when "the Gipper" was the most feared name in college football. Bergman played for the Irish in 1914, 1915 and 1916. In his last year he was named to All-American teams picked by Walter Camp and Walter Eckersall.

Bergman then enlisted in the A. E. F. aviation corps and won military honors in France.

Cotton, who with Bergman and Wayne Millner comprised a Notre Dame All-America coaching staff for the Cardinals, came along a few years after Bergman. He was a great varsity tackle for Rockne in 1921, 1922 and 1923. After graduation he accepted the position of director of athletics at St. Ambrose College, Davenport, Iowa, where he coached football and basketball.

Nats' Rookie Hurlers Futile

Beck and Sam Cunningham, who seemed to have supplanted Alex Zukowski as the rookie deemed most likely to succeed. The first wave of enthusiasm for Zukowski here has faded to something resembling a grumble following his horrible lack of pitching style which caused Harris to wonder how the fellow ever won 22 games in any league. From 100 yards away the other day, Harris was calling the pitches of Zukowski who was showing his thumb to the hitter and tipping off his curve.

Beck is the right-hander from the Nats' Orlando farm in the Florida League, and he strikes Harris as being simply smarter than the rest, plus owning a fast ball.

Charley Gelbert, now a player-coach with the Red Sox Louisville farm, watched the Nats' practice today and was high in the praise of First Baseman George Archie . . . Gelbert played with him at Toledo in 1938 and decared that "He's as good a fielder as Babe Dahlgren" . . . Asked about Archie's hitting, Gelbert said simply, "He'll hit well enough" . . . Ben Chapman, who broke in with the Yankees as a third baseman, still fancies himself as an infielder and held forth at third throughout today's workout . . . A pitcher named McCullough, from the Kinston, N. C., team, has joined the squad here and is destined for Charlotte . . . The more Harris sees of his rookie catcher, the less he is inclined to trade Rick Ferrell . . . The veterans were permitted to order six of their special model bats today, with the rookies being limited to three bats each . . . Heaviest bat on the team is swung by Chapman, a 36-euncer.

Metro Tourney Starts Tonight

Bethesda, Coolidge Meet at Tech

Eastern Engages Georgetown Prep In Nightcap; Girls Play Tomorrow

Two games in the boys' division tonight launch the ninth annual Metropolitan Scholastic Basketball Tournament at Tech gym, serving as a keynote to what may develop as the most closely contested tangle the city has ever seen.

At 7:30 Bethesda-Chevy Chase, Montgomery County titlist, takes on the "dark horse" quintet of Calvin Coolidge, and an hour later Eastern's second-place interhigh club meets Georgetown Prep's second-place Catholic Prep five.

The other four teams in the male section get their first taste of action tomorrow at the same site and time. Roosevelt, public high champion, takes on the Landon School team, which finished second in the Interstate Academic Conference. And the nightcap will be furnished by the meeting of Gonzaga and Washington-Lee, champions in Catholic Prep and Northern Virginia play, respectively.

Girls Start Tomorrow

With their number increased from four to eight teams for the first time, Metropolitan girl contenders wait until tomorrow for their first round. They start with a bang, however, for all eight teams play in a huge quadruple-header at Ritchie Coliseum, College Park. Starting at 6:30 p. m., the opponents will be as follows: Mount Rainier vs. St. Cecelia; Fairfax vs. Montgomery Blair; Bethesda-C. C. vs. G. W. High, and Sherwood vs. Hyattsville.

Girls' semifinals will be staged Wednesday at College Park and finals will precede boys' finals Saturday night at Tech gym. The boys will hold their semifinals Thursday night at Tech.

More evenly matched teams could hardly be paired than those meeting in tonight's twin session. Bethesda-C. C. and Coolidge have split even in a pair of games this year and this will be a "rubber" clash. Eastern boasts a much better record than the Little Hoyas, but a terrific improvement has been shown by Prep recently and either club might walk off victor.

Two Defenses Used

In both games it will be zone defense versus man-to-man, Bethesda and Georgetown Prep employing the zone type. The latter's, however, is a shifting sort while the Barons of Bethesda use a more or less set affair.

The Barons, on their complete record for the year, figure to win the opener, but by no huge margin. With Bob Cremins leading the scoring and dependable Bobby Keene, Al Gaist, Duke Hashagen, Elton McClure and Dick Poorstel in their line-up they seem to have the edge on the Colts, whose main threat is lanky Richie Waterman.

Unless it runs into a scoreless streak, such as seems to have hounded it this year, Eastern should measure Georgetown Prep by a fraction, Prep's Bob Barrett and Ben Decker are as good as 75 per cent of local cagers, but they hardly appear a match for the Tide's brilliant Moe Shulman and steady Ralph Capone, Richie Poston, Neil Craig and Mike Lieb.

Fighter Hassett Tells on Himself

at the Washington Hotel, gave himself a better than fair chance with Conn.

The 23-year-old Pittsburgh Adonis already has renounced his light-heavyweight championship for a June chance at Joe Louis' heavyweight crown, and he's naturally favored to administer a scientifically thorough beating to Hassett. But Daniel registers no perturbation.

"I'm heavier now than I ever have been," he explained. "I weigh about 190 pounds and I believe I'll go into the ring at that weight, for I'll probably need it to go 15 rounds.

"I took off too much weight training for Boyd, and a cut over my eye bothered me. I was ahead on points when I was stopped. I actually got tired of hitting Boyd, and I had to be knocked out to lose. I have no compaint—I just wanted to emphasize I've passed up boxing since due to pressure of business. Only an opportunity to box Conn would have brought me back at this time."

There remained that item about Hassett to the effect that he is a former sparring partner of the light heavyweight champion. While shady meaning has been attached to this in some quarters, Danny showed no reluctance to speak of the association.

"That's why I think I may be able to beat him. I boxed with him down in Florida when he was training for Gus Lesnevich. I learned a lot about his style and honestly think I can beat him."

"I've been boxing for a long time—about ten years in all, but I'm not marked up badly and haven't taken too many punches because I've fought only when I felt like it," he added.

Danny said he used to be a pretty fair sort of basketball player in Northeast High School in Philadelphia but was "kicked out" when they discovered he was boxing for money on the side. He's been fighting ever since, and he'll be 28 soon.

The Philadelphian, who stopped Buddy Scott's 17-fight winning streak here 18 months ago, will do no more gymnasium boxing. He sparred four rounds yesterday at Huron gym with Jack Crandall and Buddy Holmes and did 6 miles of roadwork. He'll confine this week's training to roadwork.

Conn, admittedly the most scientific fighter in the ring today, will come to Washington tonight and start his public workouts tomorrow at 2 p. m. in the Catholic University gymnasium.

Promoter Ray Alvis, who is co-promoting the battle with Mike Jacobs, said Conn called him last night and asked to be excused from reporting this afternoon because of "personal matters" in Pittsburgh.

Table Tennis Winners Receive Their Trophies

Fields Loses In Southern Table Tennis

Izzy Bellis, Philadelphian and top-seeded player in the first annual Southern States Open table tennis tournament at the Ice Palace, won the title over Stanley Fields, local champion in four games yesterday, 22-20, 24-22, 17-21 and 21-16.

With each conscious of the prowess of the other, the match was devoid of sensational shooting in the main. Both Bellis and Fields played too careful a game, taking but a few chances with smash shots, and the Philadelphia boy's canny placements finally wore down the local champion. Bellis won his right to meet Fields in the finals by defeating Paul Capelle, New Castle, Del., 21-17, 21-17, 21-14, while Fields took three straight from Hamilton Canning, Norristown, Pa., 21-12, 21-18, 21-13.

Carolyn Wilson, local women's champion and Eastern women's champion as well, bowed in defeat to Henrietta Wright, Philadelphia, by scores of 21—16, 21—15, 26—24.

In the mixed doubles Bellis and Miss Wright defeated Fields and Miss Wilson, 10—21, 21—18, 12—21, 21—18, 21—14. Fields, however, had some measure of victory for, teamed with Paul Capelle, the two won easily from Bellis and Ella Schuman, the latter from Washington.

The first annual Southern States Open drew two brackets of men, 64 in all, and 16 women.

Brother Act Will Feature A.A.U. Boxing

The District A. A. U. boxing tournament reaches the halfway mark tonight at Turner's arena, and again it appears that a brother act will steal the spotlight for the night.

This time, it's the Hubscher brothers, Novices Don and Roy, of the Apollo Athletic Club.

The fighting Petro family lost its bid for a grand slam last week when Charley lost a hard-fought decision to Bernie Cady in the 126-pound class for seniors, leaving Joe Danny and Jim to carry on.

But tonight Roy Hubscher's battle with Roy Rauchkolb, of the National Training School, in the 145-pound division shapes up as the feature battle. Don fights Bill Cross, of the Red Shield Club, in the 126-pound novice division.

Tonight's pairings:

Novice Class

126 POUNDS—Don Hubscher (Apollo A. C.) vs Bill Cross (Red Shield), Joe Wright (Red Shield) vs Will Work (Merrick Club).

Senior Class

Martha Biggs Wins Near-Star Sweepstakes

Coming back after a fair first block of 333 with the highest set for the evening of 362, Martha Biggs, Washington, finished with a total of 695 to win the fifth annual Lucile Young Near-Star Duckpin Tournament at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace and take down the first prize of $60. Miss Biggs finished 21 sticks ahead of Helen Sapp, also of Washington, who rolled 674 for the second money of $45. Miss Biggs' total of 695 added five pins to the record set in 1939 by Ingomar Moen who, incidentally, finished in eighth place last night.

With a record entry list of 90 fair bowlerettes, 32 more than the high mark of several years ago, the first squad started at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon and was followed by a second squad two hours later. The second block of three games started at 7 p. m.

Ruth Schooley, District League star, totaled 670 for the third money of $35; Jessie Keith, wife of Eddie Keith of the Arcadia District League team, and Rena Ridenour, Washington, tied for fourth and fifth spots and each received $27.50. Lillian Gittins, Relay, Md., and Alice Shaw, Baltimore, tied for sixth and seventh places for $17.50 each; Ingomar Moen, eighth for $12; Doris Goodall Ladies' District League on the Arcadia team, took ninth place and $9, while last place and $7 went to Dorothy Flack, Ice Palace Ladies' League, who won a free entry in the event.

Cynthia Wilkinson, Silver Springs, was high game roller in the first block with 158 while Dorothy Love, Ice Palace, had 137 in the second block. Mary L. Smith and Agnes Mecler, both of Baltimore, totaled high sets of 349 and 347 in the first and second blocks, respectively.

Colonials Host To St. John's Five

G. W. from Page 17.

State needed only to win its last two games to virtually sew up a Garden bid, and the opposition is none too tough Seton Hall, another contender, concluded its second unbeaten season last night, beating Baltimore, 45 to 44.

It looks like out of the frying pan into he fire for the Colonials, for if they get by the Redmen tonight Georgetown will be ready for their Wednesday date at Riverside Stadium. Entering the game as the underdog for the first time in the renewal of the series, due to their 50-to-42 beating in the first encounter with the Hoyas, the Colonials must win to lay claim to the city championship.

A preliminary at 7:15 will precede the varsity tilt tonight. G. W. officials have ordered 350 additional floorside chairs installed for the big games that will wind up college athletic activity here.

O'Conor Urges Court Changes In Maryland

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., March 2.—Gov. O'Conor in a statement today expressed hope that the General Assembly would "take favorable action in connection with the plans for the reorganization of our appellate court."

"For the past two months public attention has been aroused upon suggestions for the reorganization of the Court of Appeals in Maryland," the Governor said.

"This general discussion, initiated by Attorney General Walsh, has resulted in the sponsorship by the Maryland State Bar Association of a proposal, now pending in the General Assembly, that a constitutional amendment be submitted to the people for their decision.

"Inasmuch as I have been officially connected with offices during the past 20 years, in which opportunity has been given to observe the operations of the judicial system, it might be expected that I have some opinion as to the desirability of the proposed changes."

O'Conor said a comparison of the judicial setup in the State with that of other States shows that the Maryland system needs revisions.

"The present system has remained practically unchanged for three-quarters of a century, and obviously conditions have changed considerably in that space of time," he pointed out.

Dorothy Thompson Fears Nazi Plot In Broadcasts

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, March 2.—Miss Dorothy Thompson, special writer for the Washington Post, urged today that something be done about the German short wave broadcasts to the United States, which, she surmised, might have for their purpose the establishment of contact with Nazi agents in this country.

Miss Thompson made this recommendation when she was told that during broadcast Saturday night, the German announcer, speaking in English, had addressed Miss Thompson directly, asking for a clarification of a radiogram purportedly sent by her to Ameradio, Berlin.

After delivering a brief sardonic discourse on the vanity and backseat driving technique of American women, the announcer invited Miss Thompson, at her earliest convenience, to send a radiogram collect to "let us know what technique you were talking about."

Housing Groups Will Discuss D. C. Shortage

Washington's defense-born housing shortage will be discussed at a mass meeting Thursday at 8 p. m. in the North Interior auditorium, Nineteenth and F Streets Northwest, with 13 local housing authorities heading the discussion panel, it was announced yesterday.

Steps now being taken by private contractors, public agencies and welfare groups to prepare for even greater housing needs in the near future will be discussed and other action proposed, Chairman Sefton Darr said.

Officials scheduled to speak include Judge Nathan Cayton, of the Municipal Court; Loy Anderson, of the Federal Housing Administration; Robert H. Davis, District inspector of buildings; Director Helen Duey Hoffman of the Washington Housing Association and Director John Ihlder of the Alley Dwelling Authority.

Pan-American Group Formed To Fight Cancer

New York, March 2 (AP).—The first organization to unite an entire hemisphere in the fight against cancer, the Pan-American League Against Cancer, is announced by Dr. Francis Carter Wood, of Columbia University.

Seventeen nations of the New World are the charter members. A Pan-American Cancer Week will be held, and it is expected that Brazil will be the host in 1942 to the first Pan-American Congress of Cancer, sponsored by the new society.

Incorporators of the new congress in the United States include Winthrop W. Aldrich, Chase National Bank, New York City, General J. G. Harbord of R. C. A., Dr. Frank B. Jewett, president of the National Academy of Sciences, Washington, and Dr. Albert Soiland, Los Angeles.

Chaing Urges United Effort

Chungking, March 2 (AP).—Generalissimo Chaing Kai-Shek told the peoples political council yesterday that China should do her part to defend every island and city in the South Seas against Japan's southward expansion because "China's life line is in the south Pacific."

He declared that in war-time all national efforts must be coordinated with defense and nothing must be allowed to hinder the program of driving Japanese troops from Chinese soil.

Made Girls Strip to Give Him Time, Bandit Says

Los Angeles, March 2 (INS).—William R. Yost, 25, who forced women clerks in a number of stores to strip to their scantiest after he had robbed them, tonight explained why.

"I was too poor to buy a car, and needed the extra time while they were dressing to make my getaway by streetcar," Yost said. "I always turned out the lights before I made the girls strip."

Chemical Plant Will Be Built Near Elkton

By the Associated Press

Harrisonburg, Va., March 2.—A $500,000 chemical and drug manufacturing plant will be built by Merck & Co. of Rahway, N. J., on a 312-acre tract on the Shenandoah River, 3 miles south of Elkton.

Ward Swank, of Harrisonburg, who handled the legal part of the land transaction, said Merck & Co. will pay $52,000 cash for the property and will begin construction at once. The works will employ 300. The Elkton Chamber of Commerce and the industrial department of the Norfolk & Western Railroad selected the site, which was approved by Merck Co. officials after several others were investigated.

George Merck, president, and Henry Johnstone, vice president of Merck & Co., inspected the site. They said they were impressed because of a huge spring on the property and the fact it is located on a bank high above the river, with no danger of being flooded. The land is located at a bend of the Shenandoah River and has a mile and a half waterfront.

Msgr. Sheen Says U. S. Can't Accept Russia as Friend

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, March 2.—The Right Rev. Fulton J. Sheen, professor at Catholic University of America, Washington, preaching the first in his series of Lenten sermons at St. Patrick's Cathedral today, said the United States could not embrace Russia as a friendly nation and still say this Nation was aiding in a Christian fight for world justice.

Asserting that Russia had snuffed out the liberties of 60,000,000 people, Msgr. Sheen said it was "a bit incongruous to call Germany an enemy when they seized the western portion of Poland, and to call Russia a friend, although they now possess the eastern side."

There are three methods used to lead man away from the sovereignty of God, Msgr. Sheen said. The "demigod's way is to rise to power by feeding the hungry; the totalitarian states control men by violence, while the imperialist parade the material glories of the world before men and control them. Man will find his way back to God either voluntarily, by penance, or involuntarily, when the consequences of his sins force him to return."

U. S. to Rest Case In Medical Trust Suit This Week

The Government is expected to rest its antitrust case against organized medicine this week as the trial nears the end of its fourth week. It will be resumed at 10 a. m. today in District Court.

Chief Defense Counsel William E. Leahy said yesterday that the defense would present evidence for about two weeks.

The prosecution, which expected to conclude its evidence last week, requires at least two additional days of testimony because of delay last week when an alternate juror became ill.

The trial began February 5. The case involves four medical organizations and 20 defendant doctors who face charges of conspiracy to destroy Group Health Association, medical cooperative of Government workers in the District.

30 Merit Badges Go to Boy Scouts Of Arlington

Robert Clarke, of Troop 104, and George Benckert and Guinn Craft, of 108, were advanced to rank of first class; Jack McGill, of 112, and Thomas Tracy, of 102, to second class.

Merit badges awarded included:

2-Month-Old Hapsburg-Bourbon On Clipper to U. S.

Lisbon, March 2 (AP).—Two-month-old Maria Teresa Hapsburg-Bourbon Hopfinger left today for New York as the youngest passenger yet carried by a transatlantic clipper.

She is the daughter of the Archduchess of Hapsburg-Bourbon and her Polish husband, Dr. Joseph Hopfinger. The Archduchess is en route to join her brother, Prince Francisco Joseph, at Palm Beach.

Also on the plane was the four-man American Legion commission which went to London to study the situation in Britain. National Commander Milo J. Warner said the commission was impressed "by the determination and unity of purpose of the British people, particularly those in the armed forces."

Testers to Open Parley Today

The importance of the production of materials in the national defense program will be discussed at the annual committee week of the American Society for Testing Materials, which opens its sessions at 9:30 a. m. today at the Mayflower Hotel.

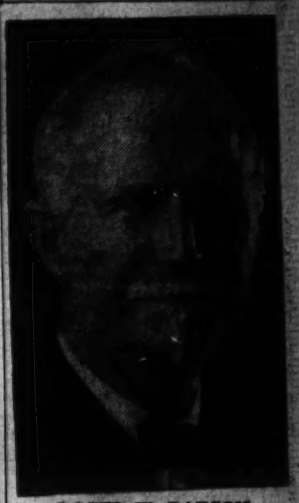

More than 200 committee meetings are scheduled to be held in the sessions which will continue through next Friday. Approximately 800 technical and engineering authorities are expected to attend. General arrangements for the meetings are under the direction of a Washington committee headed by G. E. F. Lundell, chief of the chemistry division of the National Bureau of Standards.

Real Values Change

By Roger W. Babson

The Past Is Prologue

It is true that tremendous changes have taken place during the past dozen years. City real estate can today be bought for 20 per cent of what it sold for a dozen years ago. Fifty leading stocks, which sold at $285 in 1929 can now be bought for $75. New York Stock Exchange seats, for which bankers were then scrambling to pay $600,000, can now be bought for around $25,000. Yet those economists who then forecasts such terrific declines were hooted as old pessimists and undesirable citizens. Strange to say, we are being laughed at today for suggesting that a comeback is just as possible!

ROGER W. BABSON

On the other side of the picture you will find that high-grade bonds and commodities are selling higher than they did a dozen years ago. In fact, a Massachusetts city recently sold $300,000 notes of five-month maturity at 0.03 per cent. This is at the rate of 12½ cents—or the cost of a package of cigarettes—for the use of $1,000 for five months. A dozen years ago this would have cost around $20 instead of 12½ cents.

But you say these changes affect only well-to-do people. All right, what about taxes? The 200 largest corporations in this country paid last year considerably over $2,000,000,000 in taxes. These companies had about 3,500,000 employes. This means a $600 tax for each man and woman employed. Income taxes have not only doubled, but the number of people required to pay them have greatly increased. All of this is in addition to big increases in real estate taxes and taxes upon everything we buy. Nearly all the readers of this column are today paying out in taxes, directly and indirectly, $3 out of every $10 they earn.

Those who forecast these great tax increases were howled down a dozen years ago. Yet is it any more unreasonable to believe that taxes will be much less a dozen years hence? So long as the world continues to revolve around the sun, and so long as pendulums continue to swing, then prices, interest rates, real estate values and taxes will continue to go up, and then down! It is as foolish today to think that things are going to continue to grow worse as it was in 1928 to think that conditions would continue to grow better.

We hear a lot today about the possibilities of synthetics — this means the manufacture of everything artificially, from children to coffins. College professors tell us that our potatoes will be grown by electricity, that cotton will be pulled out of the air, and, instead of bothering to cook food, we will swallow a pill three times a day with a glass of water. Perhaps we will!

Statistics show that with all the college professors, medical experts and dieticians, we are lucky today if we live to the "three score years and ten" which we read about in the Scriptures of 3,000 years ago. My guess is that the next trend will be toward old-fashioned cornbread and molasses, and that we will hear less about vitamins A, B, C, D, E, F, G, and so on ad infinitum. We think candles and kerosene have "gone," but statistics show that more of both of these are being sold today than ever before.

Let's look at the educational record: When I was a boy in Gloucester I attended a two-room schoolhouse with a stove at one end and an outhouse in the back yard. But we did learn how to spell, to add and to work. Moreover, in those days your parents were more interested to have us get training than diplomas. In fact, I did not even get a diploma when finishing my course in high school. Today, our children get their so-called education in palaces with the latest heating, ventilation and lighting equipment, to say nothing of the extravagant toilet facilities.

Mr. W. J. Cameron, of the Ford Motor Co., told me the other day that the number of students preparing to be mechanics is only about one-seventh the number now employed as mechanics; while the number now studying for the professions is about 13 times those engaged in the professions. If young men would study these figures more and two-legged figures less, they would learn to be good mechanics, builders and plumbers. The days when white-collar jobs offered the best opportunities have gone.

It has been said that the only thing which is permanent is change. This means that nothing will remain as it now exists—some things are getting better, while others are getting worse. There always will be changes. If you are blue over the war, read Green's History of England or the history of any country—including the United States. War has been a normal condition. There is nothing to worry about today if we will have the guts of our ancestors. We needed Hitler to wake us up. Surely England did.

It is fair to say that there are certain things which have always been of value, and always will be. Let me mention a few: (1) Good health is of great worth. Time and money invested in keeping ourselves well is a primary investment. (2) The ability to take care of one's self, whether by the raising of food or by the building of houses, is of real importance.

A dollar may be worth 100 cents or 10 cents, but the quart of milk from your own cow which your family drinks always has the same value. (3) A good sensible wife or husband and a family of properly-trained kids cannot be beat as a sound investment. Too many parents depend upon safe deposit boxes rather than upon children. I am still betting on the lod-fashioned investment in a good family and a home with a kitchen garden. (4) Let us not forget the church. It has come through the ages as a great pillar of strength. Better invest a little more money in your church and other good works. (5) It is well to buy United States Baby Bonds, a few well-diversified, conservative stocks and some life insurance; but remember these are only investments of the past century while the other things have always been valuable and always will be.

Am. Tobacco In Year Nets $28,311,783

By the Associated Press

New York, March 2.—The American Tobacco Co. had net earnings in 1940 of $28,311,783 as compared with $28,427,934 in 1939, according to the annual report mailed to stockholders today. That represented earnings of $5.88 on each share of common and common B stock in 1940 as against $5.11 in the previous year.

An accompanying proxy statement revealed that in the year ended December 31, 1940, George W. Hill, president, was paid $458,415.36, of which he received $356,415.36 as "incentive compensation" under the company's by-laws.

Paul M. Hahn and Vincent Riggio, vice presidents, each received $381,849.22, of which "incentive compensation" made up $201,849.22 of each vice president's remuneration.

The concern's "incentive" pay was assailed by a stockholder last year but was retained.

"This year the identical proposals you defeated so decisively last year are being put forward by the same person all over again regardless of the cost to the company in money, in annoyance and in wasted time," Hill told stockholders in a statement accompanying the annual report.

Hill said he had given "over 28 years of my life and every ounce of energy and ability I have toward the success of the American Tobacco Co." He reminded that last year he warned that altering the article providing for the incentive compensation would cause him to consider his administration had been repudiated and that he could not, with self-respect, continue in the company.

Pure Oil Co.

Chicago, March 2 (AP).—The Pure Oil Co. today reported 1940 net earnings totaled $8,718,057, an increase of $427,639 compared with 1939. This was equivalent to $1.21 a common share after preferred dividends compared with $1.11 last year.

Henry M. Dawes, president, said the oil industry is "the best prepared of all American activities to meet the emergencies of peace or war." He said the United States out of current capacity could supply not only all the oil needs of this country but of the whole world.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Increasing cloudiness and warmer Monday, cloudy and warmer Monday night; Tuesday light rain with mild temperature, colder Tuesday night and Wednesday, increasing southerly winds becoming fresh Monday afternoon or night.

For Virginia—Increasing cloudiness and warmer Monday, cloudy and warmer Monday night; Tuesday cloudy and warmer on the coast, and light rain with mild temperature in the interior, colder Tuesday night.

Conditions

There has been a marked rise in temperature over most of the eastern half of the United States due to the rapid northward movement of warm air from the Gulf of Mexico in advance of the extensive western disturbance, which was centered at 7:30 p. m. over the middle Missouri Valley and the southern Plains States, Wichita, Kans., 993.6 millibars (29.34 inches), and Omaha, Nebr., 993.9 millibars (29.35 inches). To the north of this disturbance much colder air of Polar origin is spreading rapidly southward over the northern Plains States, North Dakota and western Minnesota. Rain has fallen almost generally west of the Rocky Mountains and light snow in the northern Rocky Mountain region, the Dakotas, and Minnesota. Rain is now falling in portions of Iowa, Wisconsin and the southern Plains States. High pressure prevails over the Southeastern States, Cuba and the Bahamas, and over North Dakota. Fort Myers, Fla., 1024.7 millibars (30.26 inches), and Pembina, N. Dak., 10.20.3 millibars (30.13 inches).

Bridge Contract

Though few grand slams are bid at match-point tournaments because of the great risk involved, Mrs. Valerie Klein and Jack Cushing, both of Manhattan, clinched their victory in the Long Island mixed-pair championship by bidding and making seven spades on the cards shown in today's box.

Today's Hand

SOUTH DEALER

North: ♠ 10 ♡ Q 8 7 3 ◇ 9 5 3 ♣ J 10 8 7 6

West (Cushing): ♠ A Q J 7 6 5 ♡ K 10 5 ◇ A 10 7 6 ♣ None

East (Mrs. Klein): ♠ K 9 8 3 ♡ A 9 4 2 ◇ K Q 8 4 2 ♣ None

South: ♠ 4 2 ♡ J 6 ◇ J ♣ A K Q 9 5 4 3 2

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♣ | 2 ♠ | 3 ♣ | 3 ♠ |
| 6 ♣ | 6 ◇ | Pass | 6 ♠ |
| Pass | Pass | 7 ♣ | Pass |
| Pass | 7 ♠ | Pass | Pass |
| Pass | | | |

Opening lead: ♣ J.

They arrived at the grand slam without the aid of any of the slam conventions or control-showings now popular. The closest either player came to "cue" bidding was Cushing's call of six diamonds, indicating the ace.

He also believed that North and South, who were high up on the list of contenders for the title, were altogether too eager to sacrifice the hand, first jumping to six clubs and then going on to seven. He determined to chance a grand slam and was well rewarded when the contract proved lay-down.

Most players stopped at six spades, making seven, although one North-South team was permitted to buy the hand at five clubs, doubled, for a set of two tricks and a loss of only 300 points.

IN MEMORIAM

CORBIN, JULIA. In loving memory of my dear mother, Mrs. JULIA CORBIN, who passed away one year ago today, March 3, 1940.

No one knows how much I miss her,
No one knows the bitter pain;
Since I lost you, dear mother,
Life has never been the same.

In my heart your memory lingers,
Sweet, tender, fond and true;
There's not a day, dear mother,
That I do not think of you.
LOVING DAUGHTER, CHRISTINE.

The Post Radio Highlights

11 a. m., WJSV—Treat Time, featuring Tenor Buddy Clark, should appeal to housewives who hate the soap-operas.

6:15 p. m., WJSV—Frazier Hunt's interview with Mr. Knudsen should give some new slants on the progress of America's defense effort.

8, WRC—"Flow Gently, Sweet Afton," sung by James Melton; Francia White singing "Carmena," and Donald Voorhees' orchestra playing Paganini's immortal "Perpetuum Mobile" are the top offerings of tonight's Telephone Hour.

9, WJSV—Kay Francis stars in "My Bill," in the role she created on the screen.

9:30, WINX—George Washington meets St. John's of Brooklyn in a basketball game described by George Gow.

9:30, WRC—The Show Boat docks at Washington, presenting Virginia Verrill, Dick Todd, the Show Boat chorus and orchestra, together with a new version of "Hudson's Bay," for the approval of us local yokels.

with Glynn

The man who came to dinner and just stayed and stayed has nothing on Frank Parker, who is now singing regularly on "The Golden Treasury of Song," which you hear over WJSV every day at 3:15 p. m.

For Frank first appeared on the program a couple of weeks ago as a guest, to fill in for a day or so. But the response from C. B. S.'s Nation-wide listening audience to his fine tenor voice was so tremendous that now he's been signed up to remain on the show permanently.

The idea of having a "name" singer appear regularly on a daytime radio series is something of an innovation, but, thanks to Frank, the sponsors insist it's something of a startling success. For not only can he sing better than most, the popular ballads of today and yesterday, but he can go in for much of the fancier and more difficult musical stuff, such as operatic arias, which the average singer wouldn't dare attempt. And you'd be surprised at the number of people who are thoroughly grateful for such variety.

With Frank on the program each day is a concert orchestra, directed by Victor Bay, the man who's the musical director for WJSV's weekly "Report to the Nation," and David Ross, who also has a pretty superior voice. Ross, who has won any number of "diction" prizes, uses his to recite poetry when Parker is not singing.
